ESCAPED DEATH AT HUSBAND'S HAND

Alice Carroll, divorced wife of Albert Brethene, who was shot at by former husband just before he fired the bullets which ended his own life.

$2,500 BRIBE FOR LABOR VOTES

A. L. Leeman, Secretary-Treasurer of Wage-Earners' Central Club, Makes Affidavit of Attempt Made to Buy Condemnation of John A. Coulthurst's Record—Bogus Wage-Earners' Meeting Planned to Take Action To-night.

An attempt is being made to buy the condemnation of the labor record of John A. Coulthurst, Independence League and non-partisan candidate for Mayor.

It is sought to have such a resolution passed by the Wage-Earners' Central Club. When it was found that the Wage-Earners' Club could not be induced to take this action, a bogus labor meeting was called for to-night. The conspiracy was exposed to-day by A. L. Leeman, secretary-treasurer of the organization.

In an affidavit made to-day Mr. Leeman swears that he was informed that $2,500 has already been put out in an effort to purchase the votes of the delegates to the central organization. He swears that he was informed a like amount would be paid to him if he would attend a meeting to-night and help get the measure through.

SHOOTS FORMER WIFE THEN KILLS HIMSELF

MAN FIRES THREE BULLETS INTO HIS HEAD IN FRONT OF CITY HOSPITAL.

Crying, "I'll give you a divorce now; you'll never get one from any judge," Alfred Brethene, forty-eight years of age, shot twice at his divorced wife, Alice Carroll, in front of the City Hospital early to-day, and then fired three bullets into his own head, dying almost instantly. The woman sustained a slight flesh wound in her left arm.

Brethene, who has been lodging at a house in Tremont street, near the bridge over the railroad, was released from the House of Correction about four weeks ago, where he had served six months for trying to kill his wife.

Just about the time he was liberated the woman had been given a divorce from him on the grounds of cruelty and non-support, and the man had been hounding her ever since, threatening to kill her on sight.

Woman Tells of Death Tragedy.

Mrs. Brethene or Carroll, who has been living in daily dread of her life, is employed in the Boston City Hospital. This morning she was on her way to work in the institution, and as she came up Harrison avenue from her room at No. 5 Andrew street she saw her former husband approaching her on the same side of the street. Graphically she described the tragedy to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter but a few moments after it had occurred.

"With an oath my former husband cried out to me: 'I hear you got a divorce? Is that so?'

"'Yes, I have; nearly a month ago,' I told him.

"'You lie; you haven't,' he shouted at me. 'I know because I have been down to see the judge.'

"'What do you know about the judge? I asked him.

"'I know this much,' he shouted; 'I know you haven't got any divorce; but I'll give you a divorce now and you'll never get one through any judge!'

"With that Brethene, my former husband, raised a revolver and I started to run, for I have feared him ever since I married him three years ago. I ran across the street. He fired after me—twice, they tell me; I don't know.

Sought Safety in Doorway.

"As I dodged around the corner one of the bullets went through my left sleeve, making a slight flesh wound. The other bullet tore through my skirt.

"I ran from Harrison avenue into East Concord street and hid in a doorway. That same instant I heard several more shots fired and for a time all was quiet. As I stood there trembling for fear my husband would follow me a baker's wagon drove around and the man in it called out to me not to be afraid that the man who had been after me was dead; that he had shot himself.

"I came out of hiding and went fearfully back into Harrison avenue, and there I saw them picking up his body and placing it in the City Hospital ambulance.

"I hurried over to the hospital and went in by the employes' entrance and there they told me that my former husband was dead.

"We were married about three years ago, and ever since that time I have lived in terror of this man. He even borrowed $100 from me and my mother on which to get married claiming that he would soon have an inheritance from Germany.

"He often threatened to kill me and several times tried to do so. He was a cook and steward, and might have made $60 or $70 a month, but he had been too lazy to work. Last Easter he chased me out of the house with a razor. For this he was sent to the island for six months.

DIVORCED A MONTH AGO.

"I got a divorce from him from Judge DeCourcy on November 2 last, just about the time that he was released from the island. I knew that he would be after me, but I tried to keep out of his way, thinking that he might get over his anger."

Brethene has three sons and a daughter by a first wife living. One of his sons, Frederick, lives at No. 471 Brighton avenue, Portland, Me. The young man, who is connected with the Y. M. C. A. there, was notified of his father's suicide to-day and asked as to the disposition of the body.

Another son, John, lives in Portland also, while William Brethene lives in New York city. The daughter, who is married, lives in New Haven, Ct.

MEMBER OF GERMAN LEGATION ARRESTED

HAVANA, Nov. 29.—Secretary Fritz Deeme of the German Legation here has been arrested on the German Minister's complaint and is held in prison charged with a defalcation in his native country.

Plot to Hold Illegal Meeting.

Mr. Leeman spurned the offer and declined to have anything to do with the proposed meeting. He asserted that those who are trying to bring the meeting about are not in good standing in the Wage Earners' Central Club.

Any action that such a meeting might take, Mr. Leeman declared, would be illegal, as he is the only man who has a right to call a meeting of the club.

The notice that Mr. Leeman received for the meeting this evening was not written upon the letter head of the Wage Earners' Central Club. It was signed by a man as secretary pro tem. whom Mr. Leeman does not know.

NOTICE SENT OUT BY DALLAS.

The correct name of the central organization was not given, even in the notice. It was as follows:

November 29, 1907.

Mr. A. L. Leeman:

Dear Sir: I have been instructed by the meeting held this evening by the various ward clubs to inform you that there will be a meeting of the "Wage Earners' Clubs" for purpose of endorsing candidates for public office, at Wells' Memorial Building, Friday evening, November 29, 1907, at 8 p. m.

Fraternally yours,

HERBERT A. DALLAS,
Secretary pro tem.

ATTEMPT BY TELEPHONE.

Previous to this two attempts had been made to induce Mr. Leeman to call a meeting by men who wanted to take up the political situation. One of these attempts was made over the telephone. The other came in a letter addressed to Mr. Leeman, dated November 17, to which were attached the names of several members, all written in the same handwriting.

The name of Edmund Ward was written "Edward" Ward. Mr. Ward is a member of the club, but he was not in the city. Mr. Leeman paid no attention to this letter.

The affidavit of Mr. Leeman, exposing the plot, is here given:

"Adelbert L. Leeman, being duly sworn, deposes and says:

"I reside at 88 Seamore street, Boston, Mass. I am recording secretary of the Wage-Earners' Central Club of Boston. On the night of Wednesday, November 27, a man whom I know to be employed in the Municipal Printing Plant of Boston, and whose name I would give to any competent tribunal of investigation, met me in the composing room of the BOSTON AMERICAN and told me that $2,500 had been given to procure the condemnation of the labor record of John A. Coulthurst by the Wage-Earners' Central Club of Boston.

"The record of Mr. Coulthurst which he said was to be condemned was in the form of a typewritten copy containing only votes in the Legislature opposing certain bills and not containing Mr. Coulthurst's complete record on labor matters.

"This man said to me, in effect, that $2,500 had already been given out that the persons who were endeavoring to bring about this condemnation of Mr. Coulthurst's record believed they could obtain the votes of the wage-earners' delegates to the Central Club for $5 or $10 apiece. He said, further: 'Of course, they know you are practically the only man who can make this meeting legal, as you are the recording secretary of the club. If they have put out this much money, there is no reason why you should not get as much more for yourself.

"The meeting at which he proposed to have Mr. Coulthurst's record condemned was to be held in Wells Memorial building on Friday evening, November 29. This meeting had not been called by the officers of the Wage Earners' Central Club. The man who called the meeting are not in good standing in the Wage Earners' Club. I declined to have anything to do with it, and told him I would do my utmost to expose the conspiracy in the press.

ADELBERT L. LEEMAN.

"Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Suffolk, ss., Boston, November 29, 1907.

Personally appeared the above subscribed Adelbert L. Leeman, to me personally known, and made oath that the foregoing statement by him subscribed is true.

STEEL PIONEER DEAD.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio, Nov. 9.—John J. Williams, seventy-nine years old, one of the leaders in the steel and iron industry in America, died of old age to-day.

MRS. BRADLEY'S PASTOR GOES ON THE STAND

Called in Rebuttal by the Defence in Trial of Woman Slayer.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The defence in the trial of Mrs. Anna M. Bradley, on trial for the murder of former Senator Arthur Brown of Utah, sprung a surprise in its rebuttal testimony to-day when it called as a witness the Rev. Dr. David Utter, pastor of the Unitarian Church of Denver, Col., who officiated at the baptism of the elder of the two Bradley children, Arthur Brown, Jr. He was referred to in Mrs. Bradley's letters as "the priest," and had, in his ministerial capacity, much to do with Senator Brown and Mrs. Bradley.

District Attorney Baker submitted to the court certain "prayers" with reference to the instruction to the jury. As he mentioned the phrase "murder" in the first or second degree, Mrs. Bradley, worn and haggard, shuddered and seemed to shrink still further back into the large chair, in which she sits a helpless, huddled figure in black.

Her Friend and Pastor.

After brief testimony by Dr. Soute, relating to Mrs. Bradley's physical condition after the shooting, Edward McLean, a newspaper reporter, took the stand to say that he believed Mrs. Bradley was sane.

Dr. Utter said he saw Mrs. Bradley at her home in Salt Lake.

"I had been her friend and pastor for many years," he said, "and I went to see her in her trouble."

He talked about her possible marriage to Arthur Brown, continued Dr. Utter.

"It was on or about November 15, I expressed the belief that he would not marry her. I said, a woman in at a distinct disadvantage when she urges a man to marry her. She loses by seeming anxious. I asked her not to do so. She said, 'But it is because of the children. We owe it to them. When a gun is pointed at him, he will recede.' I don't remember her exact words. Perhaps she said, 'Give in.' I said, 'Better not bluff Arthur Brown. He cannot be coerced.' She said, 'Arthur Brown is a coward at heart.'

"I said, 'But when it came to the point you would not do it.' She said, 'Of course not.' I did not understand that she contemplated the act herself. She might have meant that a father or a brother would do it. She was obsessed by her love for the man."

Son Not Yet Out of Danger.

Immediately after the minister left the stand he walked straight to the side of his former parishioner and took a seat beside her. The first half of his testimony was favorable to the government. The last half was a serious anti-climax.

Mrs. Bradley's boy, Arthur Montgomery Brown, the younger of the two, who is suffering from an attack of membranous croup, is not yet out of danger. His condition, however, is no worse than yesterday, and there are strong hopes of his recovery.

WHAT FITZGERALD SAYS ABOUT HIBBARD IS TRUE

What Hibbard Says About Fitzgerald Is Also True

LET'S HAVE A CHANGE

Mayor Fitzgerald defends his administration by saying it is no worse than some others.

He points to Mayor Hart's administration as one of the kind that Boston doesn't want.

He is right.

So are the Republicans right when they say they don't want another Fitzgerald administration.

The fact is, the public does not want either another Hart administration or another Fitzgerald administration.

The choice between Fitzgerald and Hibbard is a choice between two machines run by politicians of a type that the voters are thoroughly disgusted with.

City politics, as practiced by BOTH of the old parties, is rotten.

A change of administration is merely putting one gang of professional politicians OUT for the sake of putting another gang of professional politicians IN.

Why not, for a change, try a man who is not tied up to either party and who has no horde of hungry henchmen waiting with outstretched hands for the "spoils" of office?

Coulthurst is, admittedly, clean, honest and able. The Good Government Association can find nothing against him, except that he is "too radical."

Well, if to be opposed to graft in ALL forms—including the wholesale graft that the public service corporations enjoy—is "too radical," then Coulthurst is guilty.

Why not, for a change, have a Mayor who IS opposed to all kinds of graft, including graft by the BIG grafters, and see if THAT won't help bring about THE CHANGE THAT WE ALL WANT?

TEACHERS NOW APPOINTED ON MERIT BASIS ALONE

BOSTON CITIZENS COMMITTEE PAYS A HIGH TRIBUTE TO SCHOOL BOARD.

Merit, not politics, now controls the appointment of teachers in the Boston Public Schools, according to the School Board Investigating Committee appointed at a conference meeting at the Merchants' Association.

The committee that to-day delivered this indorsement of the appointing system of the School Board consists of:

William J. Barry, lawyer, chairman, a prominent member of the Catholic Alumni Sodality; Francis W. Fairey, merchant, secretary of Fairey Brothers' department store, South Boston, and a former member of the School Board; Robert A. Woods, philanthropist, head worker of the South End House and chairman of the organized board of trustees of the Massachusetts Hospital for Epileptics at Foxboro; Mrs. Sarah A. Hodnett, philanthropist, well known for charitable work with Catholic and other societies in and around Boston, and Miss Katherine E. Conway, journalist, managing editor of the Pilot.

No "Pull" in Appointments.

"Any candidate (for teacher) will know that her chance depends on her merit and not on the ability of the candidate to bring political influence to bear," the committee declares. "The present system gives our children the best, the most intelligent and the most capable teachers who can be secured."

This condition is in striking contrast with the old system, according to the results of the committee's investigation. Under the old plan, the applicant for a position as teacher in the Boston public schools was required to have political influence. The result was that the candidate least qualified was frequently appointed. The reform of the system brought about a scheme whereby the candidate is now examined by a qualified board and given a rating on merit, and this rating determines the appointment.

The change lowers the selection of the more qualified candidates and saves the incapable applicants for positions the humiliation of seeking the favor of the politicians.

In its report the committee asserts:

"It is hard to get at the facts. Perhaps it is not reasonable to expect to sift out the truth from the highly colored assertions put out by candidates when an election is coming on. None of the writers of this report is on the school board, or is a candidate for membership on it, or has any motive for giving things a twist one way or the other.

"The old school board was composed of twenty-four members, chosen to represent the citizens at large, but in fact largely controlled by ward interests. Furthermore they were split up into nine 'division committees,' each of which had to district to suit itself without much regard to the others. No teacher could be appointed or promoted by the full board until she had pulled the gamut of the committees of the district committee and had made friends with them or their ward leaders. This was bad, it was demoralizing for a self-respecting young woman who was entitled to a place on her merits to be obliged to seek it in this way, and it was bad for the children because over and over again it led to giving a class of children to a less able young woman because she happened to have the more able or more influential friends.

Present Plan Explained.

"How are the teachers appointed under the new School Board? The superintendent and six assistant superintendents, who together make up the Board of Superintendents, examine all the candidates. The officers on this board are thoroughly representative and are Stratton D. Brooks, superintendent; Maurice P. White, Augustine I. Hafter, Jeremiah F. Burke, Wilfred S. Parker, Mrs. E. C. Ripley and Robert E. Burke. The important work of supervising substitutes, contributing largely to the character of the rating, is under Miss Mary C. Mellyn.

"The board marks the candidates according to a regular published scale, allowing 50 per cent. for scholarship, 30 per cent. for quality and character of teaching experience, 10 per cent. for professional preparation, and 10 per cent. for personal characteristics.

"When these young women have been thus rated according to their ability, their names are printed on the merit lists in the order of their rating. Any candidate may see exactly where she stands and will know that her chance for the next vacancy depends absolutely on her merit.

Can Think of No Fairer Method.

"We have tried to think how a fairer system could be devised for the appointment of candidates, but we are able to suggest no fairer method or one which could be more fairly applied.

"The difference to a boy or girl between a mediocre teacher who secured her position under the old system, to which influence or favoritism played such a part, and the more capable and superior teacher brought forward by the present system is certainly great. We do not hesitate to say that in the case of the average boy or girl it means a superior type of education, which they will feel throughout the whole of after life."

THOUSANDS OF STATE OFFICES FOR LEAGUERS

Democratic Party Loses Its Place as One of the Leading Parties.

Thousands of the enrolled voters of the Independence League of Massachusetts are to be appointed to office under the laws of this State. This has been settled by the official count of the votes polled in the State election of 1907. There can be no doubt about it because the law under which the appointments must be made is clear and specific.

The Independence League is entitled to have the offices in question filled from its ranks because it is the second political party in Massachusetts. The status and rank of a party under the law is determined by the number of votes polled for its nominee for Governor.

While all votes polled for a candidate must be counted for him as a total for election, regardless of the different party designations under which they are cast, no candidate can have counted for him as the total of any particular party's votes which votes as are cast for him as the candidate of any other party.

Law Must Be Obeyed.

There is no going back of the law in this case. It stands forth on the statute books clear and precise. The law will be obeyed.

Until the State election in 1907 was held the Democratic party was either the first or second party in Massachusetts from year to year as long as the oldest inhabitant can remember. But in 1907 it became the third party under the law, because the total number of the votes polled for Henry M. Whitney, the regular Democratic party candidate for Governor, was less than the total number polled for Curtis M. Guild, Jr., the Republican candidate, and less than the total number polled for Thomas L. Hisgen, Independence League candidate for Governor. The votes cast for Whitney as the Democratic citizen nomination paper candidate do not count in his total as the candidate of the Democratic party. Neither do the votes polled for him as the Independent Citizens' candidate and the votes polled for him under no party designation. He ranks on the list as the third party candidate because the most votes polled for him under any one party designation placed him as a candidate of any one party below Guild and Hisgen.

Under the law there are thousands of offices to be filled by appointment from the ranks of enrolled members of the two parties which are classed as the leading parties by reason of their nominees for Governor receiving the most votes as separate and distinct party candidates. Under the law these offices are to be filled from the Republican and the Independence League parties.

Some Important Appointments.

Most of these appointment will be for election day officers, but there are others which are lucrative and influential. They include:

A member of the Boston Excise Board, who is to be appointed in June, 1908.

A Ballot Law Commissioner, who is to be appointed in June or July, 1908.

Three Fall River Police Commissioners, under the law they are to be appointed from the two principal parties (Republican and Independence League), on the first Monday in June, 1908.

A Boston Election Commissioner. One should be appointed on May 1, 1908. As the law says that the election board's membership of four shall always be divided between the two leading parties, the Independence League is clearly entitled to have an Independence Leaguer named for the next appointee.

In 1908 there must also be Independence League representation upon the Board of Registrars of voters. This board has four members, who each serve a year. The law says they must be appointed from the two leading parties. The two leading parties are the Republican and Independence League parties.

But beside the Boston offices for whose occupancy only Independence Leaguers are eligible, there are throughout the State an army of wardens, deputy wardens, clerks, deputy clerks, inspectors, deputy inspectors and ballot clerks to be appointed from League ranks.

Every Independence Leaguer should see that he is properly enrolled.

LEGISLATIVE RECORD PROVES COULTHURST IS FRIEND OF LABOR

Independence League Candidate Declares That He Voted for Nearly Fifty Labor Bills and Led Battle for 5-Cent Fares.

John A. Coulthurst, Independence League candidate for Mayor, speaking at rallies in Wards 18 and 19, on Thanksgiving Eve, replied to the attacks made on his legislative record. He took one measure after another and amid applause told just what he had done and why. His vote favored labor on fifty or more bills.

In his speech Mr. Coulthurst said:

"In the three years that I was in the Legislature (1902, 1903 and 1904), I introduced twenty-five petitions for legislation and bills, in most of which I was personally and actively interested and fought for before committees and on the floor of the House. Among them was the famous Five-Cent Fare bill; a bill for cheapening morning and evening train service; a bill providing for the consolidation or abolition of State commissions; a bill to improve Stony Brook in the city of Boston; a bill intended to cheapen and improve telephone service, gas and electric light service and street railway service.

Fought Against Trusts.

"Concerning this measure the Springfield Republican said:

"'Mr. Coulthurst of Boston made the most systematic effort which has been made for a long time to get at some sort of foundation for a forward movement for the benefit of the people in relation to the combination of capital. He made a good fight for it, but was defeated by the narrow margin of 76 to 85.' (June 11, 1904.)

"I was one of the most active and aggressive members of the Democratic minority on the floor of the House and before committees, and always favored by my vote and in debate measures intended for the benefit of the common people of Massachusetts.

"Out of 200 roll calls in the three years I was present on about four out of five roll calls, or 160 all told. I never lodged a vote on any measure that came up before the Legislature, and when not voting on a roll call was necessarily absent from the House on legitimate business connected with my public duties.

"The following is a statement of my vote on the large public questions affecting public service corporations:

His Legislative Votes.

"On February 20, 1902, I voted in favor of a bill to allow the purchase of gas and electric light plants by cities and towns.

"On March 19, 1902, I voted in favor of a similar measure.

"On March 25, 1903, I voted in favor of a similar measure.

"On March 27, 1903, I was recorded in favor of a similar measure.

"On April 2, 1902, I was recorded on a bill to allow free competition in the business of furnishing gas and electricity.

"On May 5, 1903, I was absent on the vote on a similar bill.

Voted for 'Phone Probe.

"On Feb. 2, 1904, I voted in favor of the appointment of a joint special committee to investigate the telephone business.

"On April 26, 1904, I voted in favor of a bill to appoint a committee to consider the improving and cheapening of telephone service, street railway service, gas and electric light service.

"On April 26, 1904, I voted in favor of a bill intended to improve telephone and telegraph service, and opposed the bill suppressed by the telephone companies to put telephone companies under the Gas Commission.

"On April 2, 1902, I voted in favor of the two-cent-a-mile bill.

"On April 8, 1902, I was recorded in favor of an order to compel the railroad companies to furnish the Legislature with a list of passes issued by them.

"On April 17, 1902, I was again recorded in favor of the two-cent-a-mile bill.

Urged Cheaper Fare.

"In 1902, 1903 and 1904 I introduced and fought bills to provide for a five-cent fare on the steam railroads within the limits of Boston, and a bill to provide cheap morning and evening train service on railroads in the suburban district of Boston.

"On April 15, 1903, I was again recorded in favor of the 2c-a-mile bill.

"On April 24, 1903, I was similarly recorded.

"On April 12, 1904, I voted in favor of the bill to increase from $5,000 to $25,000 the damages that might be recovered from railroad and street railway companies for loss of life.

"On May 11, 1904, I was recorded in favor of the same measure.

"My attitude on labor questions has been grossly misrepresented in one of the Boston papers and I trace this unfair and unjustified attack to the camp of my Democratic opponent.

"I intend to give a fair, honest, full and complete statement of my votes and attitude upon the measures favored by organized labor.

"I acknowledge that once in 1902 and once in 1904 I voted against propositions supported by them, but upon every other occasion upon which I was recorded I voted for the bills supported by organized labor. To show the unfairness of the attack upon my labor record I cite the instance of the 'picketing' bill. It was charged that I dodged the vote on the 'picketing' bill. That statement is false. In 1903 and 1904 I voted for the bill. In 1902, on Wednesday, May 28th, I was absent from the floor of the House at the time of the vote on the bill. When I returned shortly afterwards and found what had occurred I rose to a question of personal privilege on the floor of the House, and had it recorded in the minutes of the meeting that if present I would have voted for the bill.

Supported Labor Bills.

"My record will clearly show that on the fifty or more bills approved by organized labor, I supported all but two of them.

"For example, I supported the eight-hour law bill, the picketing bill heretofore referred to, a bill to authorize additional work on State highways in time of industrial distress, an amendment to the subway bill providing for citizen labor and an eight-hour day, a bill providing for the election of Senators by popular vote; a bill to provide for a new State consumptive hospital; a bill to regulate the hours of labor for nurses and attendants in public hospitals; a bill to provide for citizen labor in the public service and upon contracts with the city or any city or town."—John A. Coulthurst.

Coulthurst Shows He Voted for 50 Labor Bills

"My record will clearly show that on the fifty or more bills approved by organized labor I supported all but two of them. For example, I supported the eight-hour law bill, the picketing bill, heretofore referred to, a bill to authorize additional work on State highways in time of industrial distress, and an amendment to the subway bill providing for citizen labor and an eight-hour day; a bill providing for the election of Senators by popular vote; a bill to provide for a new State consumptives hospital; a bill to regulate the hours of labor for nurses and attendants in public hospitals; a bill to provide for citizen labor in the public service and upon contracts with the city or any city or town."—*John A. COULTHURST AND VICTORY SLOGAN AT BIG RECEPTION

LEAGUE CANDIDATE CONFIDENT OF VICTORY, DECLARES HE IS IN FIGHT TO FINISH

"Coulthurst and victory!"

That was the slogan taken up at the Thanksgiving day reception tendered to John A. Coulthurst, Independence League and non-partisan candidate for Mayor, yesterday at the League headquarters in the Old South Building.

It was an enthusiastic gathering. The rooms of the League headquarters were crowded for two or three hours after 4 o'clock by the popular candidate for Mayor, other candidates on the ticket, and by scores of their friends.

When Mr. Coulthurst arrived he was greeted with cheer after cheer. There was no set speech making. Mr. Coulthurst sauntered about, shaking hands with those present and chatting with them upon the situation. His words and bearing reflected the confidence he feels in the result.

Confident of Victory.

"From now until the end of the campaign," said Mr. Coulthurst to one group of men, "I propose to put up the fight of my life to win, and I am convinced by information that I have received, publicly and privately, that I shall win."

An interesting feature of the meeting was a statement made by a resident of the city who had had business dealings with Mr. Coulthurst as a lawyer. The man was unknown to most of those present, but he gave his name and had this to say of the League candidate:

"Some years ago I suffered from an accident on a railroad. I went to Mr. Coulthurst and gave him the case. I told him that he could have half of what he recovered. He was successful in the suit he brought, but when he came to take his pay he refused to accept half the money and would only receive a moderate fee."

Three Meetings for To-night.

"I came here to make this statement because I know that John A. Coulthurst is an honest man. I know that a man who is honest as a lawyer would be honest as Mayor of Boston. No working man can make a mistake in voting for Mr. Coulthurst."

Three meetings are scheduled for to-night in South Boston. It is anticipated that these meetings will be well attended and prove of a highly interesting character. They will begin at 8 o'clock at the following places:

In Ward 13—Congress Hall, West Broadway.

In Ward 14—Gray's Hall, East Broadway.

In Ward 15—Courtroom, Dorchester and West Fourth streets.

Mr. Coulthurst will speak at each of these meetings, and he will discuss the real live issues of the campaign and strike right out from the shoulder. Other good speakers will be at each rally.

The fact that so many excellent speakers and strong members of the two old parties have flocked to the standard of Coulthurst has caused the two other candidates for Mayor to go to extreme lengths in their efforts to win the election.

Here are some of the men out for Coulthurst:

John K. Berry, prominent in Republican circles.
Former Senator Richard Sullivan, Democrat.
John J. Walsh, Esq., Republican.
Timothy J. Ahern, Esq., Democrat.

Each of these men has a personal following and they are doing all in their power to insure the election of Coulthurst. Both Mr. Ahern and Senator Sullivan spoke Wednesday evening in Roxbury, and they were enthusiastically received.

German Voters With Coulthurst.

Mr. Sullivan scored Fitzgerald for his bad appointments and called attention to the fact that the Mayor in Faneuil Hall speech did not attempt to justify his appointments of the heads of departments. Both Mr. Sullivan and Mr. Ahern will be heard from frequently between now and election day.

Mr. Coulthurst got a glowing reception on Wednesday evening at the reunion of St. Francis de Sales' parish in Mechanics' Building. He proved very popular among the handsome young ladies who were in attendance and enjoyed dances with a number of them.

From this social gathering Mr. Coulthurst went to the St. Vincent Parish reunion in Bethesda Hall, Roxbury, and enjoyed the occasion very much and had a very pleasant time, he said, meeting those in attendance.

Last evening Mr. Coulthurst mingled with the members of the Prince club on Middlesex street. The League candidate has been assured that he will get an unusually large vote from the German residents.

Plan to Aid League Candidate.

The Independent campaign committee for Mr. Coulthurst held a well-attended meeting on Wednesday evening at the residence of J. H. Nolan, No. 75 Sheridan street, Ward 22. The meeting was held for the purpose of devising additional means for the furtherance of the campaign of Mr. Coulthurst.

All preparations for covering for ward in a thorough manner have already been made. The organization will be a permanent one. The next meeting will be held on December 5 at the residence of Mr. Nolan. After that the meetings will be held at a headquarters that is to be established.

Addresses were made by J. A. Kenny of Ward 23, J. H. Nolan, Asa Cohen, F. J. Breitenbach and others. Each one of the members present pledged himself to work steadily for the election of Coulthurst until election day.

HEBREWS RALLY TO SUPPORT OF COULTHURST

John A. Coulthurst, Independence League and Non-Partisan candidate for Mayor, was given a warm indorsement yesterday by the Independent Hebrew voters of Ward 17, who at a large and enthusiastic meeting in their headquarters on Northampton street, unanimously declared their approval of his candidacy and principles.

The organization went on record as being unalterably opposed to the election of Mayor Fitzgerald, charging that his administration had caused a leakage in the financial affairs of the city and increased the municipal indebtedness. Solomon Wyzansky called the meeting to order, and William Bornstein was named as chairman.

Backbone Also Needed.

"For many years," declared Mr. Bornstein in a stirring address, "our people have been made the football of unscrupulous politicians. We have bended the knee too long in weak submission. We have exploited our race as being in favor of their actions, but now we are going to assert our right and show them that we can choose our own candidates without their dictation.

"Heckbone, as well as Jawbone, is needed by the man they should favor," said Mr. Bornstein. "The one man needed to conduct the affirs of Boston should stand firm against encroachments on the city treasury, and the only person who stood pre-eminent in that respect was the candidate of the Independence League, John A. Coulthurst.

"You men all remember the three councilmen who pledged themselves to vote for a municipal lighting bill, and you all remember how they dodged that measure, and how Mayor Fitzgerald fought to kill it. Let us not forget that lighting bill when we cast our ballots."

For Coulthurst and Phelan.

It was then voted, on motion of Abraham Goldstein, to indorse the candidacy of John A. Coulthurst, as well as that of Thomas F. Phelan for the Common Council in Ward 17, to advocate their election among the Hebrew voters of the ward, and to make a canvass in their favor.

It was voted also to attend the rally to be held in the Vine Street Church to-morrow evening in the interests of the candidates of the Independence League.

Fitzgerald has the largest campaign fund ever spent to elect a Mayor of Boston.

Where Did He Get It?

BALLOON UP IN FLIGHT TO THE COMMON

NORTH ADAMS, Nov. 29. Without the slightest sign of nervousness, although it was his first ascension alone, and seemingly paying more attention to posing for a moving picture machine than to his airship, Frederick E. White of New York rose from North Adams in a balloon at 11:03 a. m. to-day.

He soared half a mile and sailed southeast over the Hoosac Mountains. White declared when he went up that he hoped to alight on Boston Common. The day is perfect and the ascension was one of the prettiest ever seen in the Berkshires. He has hitherto had a pilot, but now wishes to qualify as an aeronaut.

CITY DEBT $111,848,735, SAYS FINANCE BOARD

City Debt More Than Trebled In 22 Years

This shows the actual net debt of the city from 1885 to 1907:

Year.	Amount.	Per Capita.	Per Cent of Valuation.
1885	$30,110,621.32	$77.13	4.39
1890	33,050,900.94	73.70	4.02
1895	42,025,948.10	84.57	4.42
1900	85,914,373.13	153.17	7.60
1905	105,941,589.49	177.94	8.40
1907	111,848,735.06	183.43	8.51

COMMISSION AGAIN EMPHASIZES RECKLESS EXPENDITURE OF FITZGERALD RULE.

That the actual net debt of the city of Boston is $111,848,735.06 instead of the $98,821,41 shown by the auditor's report, is the statement made by the Boston Finance Commission in a communication to Mayor Fitzgerald to-day.

The communication treats of the city debt and the $1,584,600 loan bill approved by Mayor Fitzgerald on July 26. The bill is cited as an "illustration of the reckless manner in which money is borrowed by the city government."

The commission recommends the immediate repeal of items in the loan bill amounting to $850,000, representing the items regarded as conspicuous so far as they have not been issued.

Ten-Year Limit on Loans.

It is further recommended that all future loans for pavements and street construction be limited to ten years, as experience has shown that this represents the life of a pavement. In his testimony Superintendent of Streets James H. Murphy himself, it is said, has said that of the $400,000 items for street improvement in the big loan bill is to be used for current expenses. The commission believes that $100,000 of this loan, which has not been issued, should not be issued, but secured free myths as they can be done, it asserts, by the practice of economics.

The commission repeats its suggestion made some time ago that no land be acquired by the city at private treaty at more than 25 per cent. in excess of the assessors' valuation, and that the Legislature be asked to authorize the city to acquire by eminent domain land for any public use.

Hereafter the commission recommends that when any loan bill is passed by the City Council the opinion in writing of the head of each department concerned be obtained.

The actual net debt of $111,848,735.06 amounts, the commission states, to 8½ per cent. of the city's valuation. It means the net per capita burden on every man, woman and child in Boston is $183.43.

Prove Coulthurst Charges.

The figures show that the actual net debt has increased under Mayor Fitzgerald's administration $5,907,145. The figures given by the commission substantiate the statements reiterated on the stump night after night by John A. Coulthurst, the Independence League candidate for mayor.

The auditors' reports in regard to the debt are misleading, inasmuch as they treat only of the direct city and county debt. Boston's share of the State and Metropolitan must be considered in figuring the actual net debt, the commission says, repeating the assertion made by Mr. Coulthurst.

Between 1895 and 1907 the commission says the population increased 22½ per cent., the valuation 58 per cent., and the debt 166 per cent.; and on January 1, 1907, the debt per capita had increased 84 per cent. of the valuation and $183.43 per capita.

"No community can thrive," the communication says, "under the load of a debt which is piling up four times as fast as its wealth, and seven and a half times as fast as its population."

Loan bills which could not pass on their merits, but are lug-rolled through the City Council, are responsible in a large measure for the great debt, the commission says.

The commission recommends that none of the $62,000 appropriated in the big loan bill for the bath department be expended at the present time. The trustees are opposed to every item for their department in the bill.

Protests Land Purchase.

The commission renews its protest against the expenditure of the $50,000 provided for in the loan bill for the purchase of land for the enlargement of Mount Hope and Evergreen Cemeteries. The $5,000 for a wall for the North Dorchester burial ground should come from the tax levy, the commission says.

The loan of $140,000 for buildings and equipment for the new consumptives' hospital is approved of.

Of nine items in the loan bill, aggregating $185,000, for the fire department, of which but seven were recommended by the Fire Commissioner, the commission approves of but four, disapproving of items amounting to $69,000. The Parker Hill fire house project is disapproved of.

5 KILLED, 6 INJURED IN A TROLLEY WRECK

BIG FREIGHT ENGINE HURLS CAR HIGH IN AIR AT WATERBURY.

WATERBURY, Ct., Nov. 29.—A freight train bound for Hartford, on the Highland division, crashed into a double-track trolley car aboard of which were thirteen persons, including the motorman and conductor, early to-day. Five of the passengers were killed and the other six were more or less seriously injured. The motorman climbed out through a window and escaped, and the conductor escaped unhurt.

KYLE, SARAH, twenty-six years old, No. 28 Union street.

CORCORAN, ANNIE, twenty-four years old, No. 1,062 Bank street.

FRENCH, ROBERT, twenty years old, Waterville.

Unidentified man about thirty years old.

Unidentified woman about twenty-five years old.

The injured:

ANDREW LEGLIEN, cut about the head and injured.

LITTLE HAMLEY, cuts and bruises, not serious.

MARGARET MELLEN, broken right arm.

ARNOLD BENSON, foot crushed.

THERESA KELLY, ankle broken, removed to hospital.

JAMES ALLEN, leg cut and bruised.

Dead Mangled by Wheels.

The dead were mangled and their limbs scattered along the tracks and immediate identification was impossible. The bodies were removed to a temporary morgue and held for identification.

The accident occurred just north of the temporary union station. The crossing is equipped with gates, and Gateman John Slavin, who has been arrested, says a passenger train had just arrived from Waterbury and he did not see the approaching freight, a heavy train hauled by two engines. The gates were raised and the conductor of the trolley car, John Dillon, who had run out to signal the car, gave the signal to go ahead, he says Motorman Charles Learned. The conductor has been arrested.

According to Motorman Learned, when he got directly across the track he noticed the freight was approaching he saw it, and immediately opened his controller to the last notch. The sudden turning on of the power, he says, threw the automatic switch over the trolley platform cutting off the power entirely. It could not have moved 40 again he says the freight was upon him and he had only time to jump from the platform window and save himself.

Car Crushed Like Shell.

The car was picked up by the big mogul engine on the head end and carried a distance of several hundred feet, being crushed like a shell. The occupants of the car were tossed about amid the debris, and several of them literally ground to pieces before the freight could be stopped.

The passengers, mostly women, were nearly all bound for the factory of the Oakville pin company. The freight train was in charge of Engineer Leo Beardsley, Conductor R. A. Woods and Fireman F. F. Green. The trainmen had no warning of the crash until they saw the car stop in their path, but a few feet away.

STOCK PRICES RECEDE AFTER GOOD OPENING

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Although the stock market opened with the general list showing advances when compared with the closing of Wednesday, rumors of probable reductions in the dividends of the Gould stocks and the probable calling of loans which are secured by these shares unsettled the market, with the result that gains which had been established in many stocks during the first ten minutes of trading were wiped out and losses averaging a point recorded in their places.

Liquidation of Missouri Pacific continued, that stock losing 1¾ points. Selling of Western Union was responsible for a decline of 4½ points.

London was irregular. The Bank of England discount rate remains unchanged. Wheat was off about a cent a bushel, while cotton was 50 cents a bale higher.

Trading on the curb market was quiet but steady.

After the first few moments, when some irregularity was noticeable in the dealings on the Boston Stock Exchange, prices braced up and firmness became a feature. The strength was accompanied in some cases by a semblance of activity, principally in the copper stocks.

BOSTON GIRL PLIES WHIP ON MAN IN PUBLIC

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Nov. 29.—David Hirsch of No. 1,633 North Nineteenth street, has been publicly whipped here by Miss Innes Elizabeth Schaeffer, formerly of Boston, owner and exhibitor of blooded dogs at the annual dog show. The whipping took place in Horticultural Hall. Five times the young woman wielded her whip and each stroke made a welt across the man's face.

Vainly he strove to avoid her blows, but they were aimed with the strength and vigor of a determined woman. Bystanders finally intervened.

Many visitors were in the building and saw Miss Schaeffer's vicious attack. It was her voice, clear and determined, above the chorus of dog howls which first attracted attention.

"Apologize and promise to retract what ever you may have said about me or I shall thrash you right here," she said. Hirsch laughed scornfully.

"You thrash me?" he said. "I dare you to try it."

Miss Schaeffer accepted the challenge.

She says Hirsch circulated false rumors about her. "I hunted up Hirsch him every time I meet him until he apologizes and retracts," said Miss Schaeffer to-day.

VERNON CLUB NAMES BOARD OF OFFICERS

Miss Margaret Brennan, the popular president of the Vernon Club, was re-elected at the second annual meeting of that organization held last night at her home, No. 27 Phillips street, Roxbury. The fifty-two members were unanimous in choosing her for another term. Dinner was served and Miss Shannon and Catherine Brennan assisted in the entertainment, with piano and vocal music. The other officers chosen are: Vice-president, Catherine Shannon; secretary, Evelyn Ferguson; treasurer, Mary Devlin.

1 DEAD, 2 BADLY HURT IN GLOUCESTER FIRE

MANY THRILLING RESCUES FROM BLAZE IN BOARDING HOUSE.

Special to the Boston American.

GLOUCESTER, Nov. 29.—One man was killed, a man and a woman were probably fatally injured, and there were many thrilling escapes from death as a result of a fire which caused between $6,000 and $7,000 damage in the Harvard boarding house, of which Mrs. Catherine McDonald is the proprietoress, at Main and Water streets at 3 a. m. to-day.

The dead man is John Fenton, who jumped from a sixth-story window and broke his neck.

The seriously injured are Albert Anderson, who climbed down a rope fire escape and dropped forty feet, breaking both his legs and receiving internal injuries, and Mrs. Augusta Johnson, a domestic, who was overcome by smoke, and is in such a nervous condition that the doctors of the Addison Gilbert hospital, where she was taken, fear they cannot save her life.

Among others slightly injured are: James McEachern, burns about head and face.

E. Chester Tarr, struck on head by falling timber.

Patrolman Henry Joyce, burned on hands and head.

Fire Robinson, a fireman, struck by stream from hose, overcome by smoke.

Boarders Lost All.

Several Gloucester skippers, just home from the mackerel grounds, lost the financial proceeds of their trips.

Captain Wallace Parsons left $500 in his room, which the firemen were unable to find when the blaze was extinguished.

Captain Parsons rushed to the roof when he was awakened, and then tried to reach the ground by means of a fire escape on the rear of the building. When he reached the fourth floor he was almost suffocated, and but for some firemen, who pulled him in a window, he would have become unconscious. They led him to the street through fire and smoke, but before he reached there he was badly burned about the face and head.

None of the forty boarders saved any of their personal belongings.

When the flames were discovered by Thomas C. Roberts, local superintendent for the Boston & Northern street railway, and one of the boarders, they were shooting across both the front and rear exits.

Without thinking of his personal safety, Mr. Roberts hurried around the various rooms and awakened the sleeping boarders and then climbed down a rope to the ground.

Meanwhile an alarm had been sent in, and when the firemen arrived terrified men and women were hanging out of the windows.

Neck Broken in Jump.

One of the men, Fenton, refused to heed the appeal of the firemen to wait until they could raise a ladder, and jumped.

He was picked up on the sidewalk, dead, with a broken neck.

Fenton had hardly landed on the ground when Albert Anderson was seen dropping down a rope fire escape, hand over hand.

Forty feet from the sidewalk he lost his presence of mind and let go.

At the hospital it was found that his both legs were broken and that he had received internal injuries which it is believed will cause his death.

Mrs. Johnson was found on the roof by firemen and carried down a ladder to the street. All of her clothing was burned in her room.

She was still unconscious when she reached the hospital.

One after another of the women were lowered from the windows by the firemen. Several of them were overcome by fright and smoke before they were rescued.

George Powers and Ralerio Givolato were almost frozen when they were found on the roof wearing only their underclothing, and carried down ladders by the firemen.

The firemen and police say that not one of the boarders was able to leave the boarding house by exits, and some of the men who tried to escape through them were seriously burned and almost overcome by smoke.

$8,000 LOSS BY GLUE FACTORY FIRE IN GLOUCESTER

GLOUCESTER, Nov. 29.—Eight thousand dollars worth of damage was caused by a destructive fire last night in the A. W. Todd Company glue and fertilizer plant, destroyed by a fire which had a mysterious origin. The factory, which is a five-story wooden building, has been burned four times since its erection. The blaze started in the first floor and only the efforts of the building by the automatic fire apparatus prevented the entire surrounding section from being fire-swept.

GERMAN BANK LEADER GIVES U.S. WARNING

Special Cable to Boston American.

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—Herr Director Rudolph Koch, of the Deutsche Bank, was asked by the AMERICAN to-day for his opinion on the proposed government central bank for the United States.

"It is imperative that the United States reform its monetary system to prevent crises," he said. "The confidence of the European public has been sorely shaken by the loss falling out of the finest American securities. Investors here are trying to get rid of their shares and refuse even bonds.

"The Agrarians insist that America is responsible for the high discount rate of the Reichsbank.

"America," continued Herr Koch, "really needs a more elastic currency. Many remedies have been suggested, but the best solution is the Central Bank, with a monopoly of the note tax like the German system, which was recommended last year by the New York Chamber of Commerce.

"In Germany the Reichsbank and several State banks are authorized to issue notes to a certain amount of their capital stock. A certain percentage of their notes is free from tax, which increases as it approaches nearer to the limit.

"If a central bank is impossible, the national banks should be authorized to increase their note issues up to a certain percentage of their capital stock, with a similar note tax.

"I trust the American government and the American financiers will find a remedy to end the crisis quickly."

Chase, Chelsea street, Everett, in the presence of a large gathering of friends. Rev. L. R. Atwood of Quincy was the officiating clergyman. Miss Myra Learned of Brookline was bridesmaid, while Henry Walborn acted as best man. The bride's young sister, Addie, and Miss Cora Miner were flower girls. The latter also attended honeymoon the couple will live in Boston.

TWO STOKERS LOST OFF MAURETANIA

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Two of the Cunard liner Mauretania's stokers tumbled from the forward gangplank as they were returning from a Thanksgiving night celebration early to-day and were drowned. The names of the drowned men could not be ascertained until the Mauretania's 400 stokers can be paraded and roll called.

JACK "TWIN" BEATEN IN 25 ROUNDS BY KAUFMAN

Boston Man Puts Up Poor Exhibition, and Coast Champion Gets Decision.

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 29.—When Referee Billy Roche, formerly of New York, decided in favor of Al Kaufman of this city, after the latter had fought twenty-five rounds of a clean character with Jack (Twin) Sullivan of Boston in Jimmy Coffroth's arena, a number of the spectators hooted and yelled "robber!"

For all that, the award was the only one Roche could have made under the circumstances. Sullivan's end of the fight was a poor display. He was on the aggressive during the first part of the fight, but after the 10 to 6 betting entering the ring, and there were reasons that he was to "lay down" to the big Native Son.

Promptly Coffroth warned the two heavyweights, in the presence of Roche and the seconds, that there would be no prize money forthcoming and that bets would be declared off if the contest bore a suspicious look.

Sullivan Off in Battle.

The rumor-monger had it that Sullivan was to lose on a foul, and when the fight was over there were not wanting those who declared Sullivan contrived to lose on general results in order that the Kaufman bets might stand good. This is an extreme view of the situation, and the chances are that Sullivan did his best. His best, as compared with the way he handled Broncho Bill Squires, was away below par.

In the early rounds the Twin managed to draw blood from Kaufman's nose with overhand lefts, but as the fight progressed Jack's blows grew weaker. Occasionally he put on a spurt and reached Kaufman's face with lefts and rights.

At such times the Sullivanites became excited, thinking a knockout was imminent, but there was not force enough in any of Jack's deliveries.

Busy Hours for Referee.

In the opening fighting, whenever he hit Kaufman on the face, or outmatch, he clinched quickly, and Roche put in two of the hardest hours of his life splitting the men apart. There was much difference in Sullivan's fighting from when he met the Australian.

Sullivan is a past master at covering up, and probably seven out of ten of the San Francisco's rights were stopped by Sullivan's arm. Kaufman kept trying, however. He scored frequently with close straight lefts, and he sent a right upper cut to good purpose many times when Sullivan had his arms wrapped around his head.

Sullivan, as usual, allowed his head to roll when struck, and thus saved himself from the jarring effects of the blacksmith's heavy fist.

Sullivan Rallied in Storm.

The most exciting round in the whole twenty-five was the sixteenth. Kaufman, as usual, was the aggressor. He kept poking the left into Sullivan's stomach and Sullivan came back with a left handed body swing.

The smack of his wrist against Kaufman's side was heard all over the arena. Kaufman then cut loose with straight lefts and rights, reaching the face and the crowd began to yell, the way it always does, when a knockout seems imminent.

Sullivan, with blood welling from his lips, ducked in and clinched, and Roche parted them. Sullivan made faces at Kaufman and Al crowded him again and beat him across the ring.

Sullivan then turned and went at his big opponent head over hand. His blows were hard enough to make Kaufman's head ring from side to side, and that is about all. They did not hurt a particle, and Kaufman grinned and poised his right for a knockout punch.

The chance did not come, although he managed to shoot in straight punches through the Boston man's guard and bringing the blood anew from nose and mouth.

Sullivan seemed to be in a bad way, but he braced himself again, and mixed it with Kaufman in the corner of the ring, getting in several fierce with both gloves.

Kaufman then tired and was hurt, for the writer the round proved that Sullivan was thoroughly fearful of a knockout punch.

In the beginning of the contest Sullivan kept throwing his head low and stabbing Kaufman's stomach. Kaufman just stepped back and feinted until the opportunity came to send in a straight left on the mouth.

A second later they were clinching, and Sullivan was using overhand lefts on Kaufman's face. Kaufman kept very cool.

He was never hurried, in fact, at no time during the contest.

THANKSGIVING A RED LETTER DAY IN BOSTON

Thanksgiving Day this year was more than ever a red letter day in Greater Boston. There were few in the city, poor or rich, no matter where they were, who did not enjoy a special dinner. The weather was kind, and there were many good hearted people who looked after the wants of the less fortunate who otherwise would have gone without the turkey and "trimmings" that comprise the Thanksgiving dinner. Through the efforts of the Salvation Army and other charitable organizations in Boston children from the city's slums were well cared for until they were satisfied that Thanksgiving Day is the greatest day of the year—at least except only to the Fourth of July.

The patients at the Boston Children's hospital forgot their pains and aches long enough to enjoy a fine dinner provided by the nurses. The crippled children of the outpatient department had their dinner served by a big table in the Hotel Orford. In the City Prison the women prisoners, even, unable to secure their release on bail, had the regular noon lunch made appetizing by the addition of dainties supplied by the officials. A fine turkey dinner was served for the prisoners at the Charles County Jail. At the Home for Aged Women, No. 19 Common street, there was good cheer and fine appreciation of the annual turkey dinner. The few married women who prefer to spend Thanksgiving at Memorial Hall or Harvard Union.

Although hotel registers showed a deal of blank whiteness in the hotels and restaurants did a rushing business in spite of the weather.

At Newport there were special dinners at the hospital, asylum, Children's Home for Friendless Women, and for apprentices at the training station, but the feature of the day was the dinner at McCarthy and his family were able to have the turkey and a little clothing and furnished their dinner in the ruins of their former home.

President Roosevelt, with Mrs. Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, Ethel and Kermit Roosevelt spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Griscom at their palatial estate, Pepelew, Virginia, at the old mansion of James Madison.

The American Society in London enjoyed its traditional dinner and heard speeches by Ambassador Whitelaw Reid, Sir George Scott White and others.

We can fit you better without alteration than any other store in town.

If you have never worn the Kuppenheimer clothing or the Siegel Special Clothing you have never had your money's worth in full. You may think you have, you may be fully satisfied with the clothing you have been wearing at the price you have been paying for it, but, if you will give us the opportunity we will prove to you that you have never been as well satisfied as you will be with Kuppenheimer or Siegel Special suits and overcoats.

Now, anybody can open the smallest clothing store in America and up on an argument like the above, but it wouldn't mean anything to you unless it had some ground to stand on. Here is the foundation on which our argument is based—although this is a great big department store, we are the largest retailers of men's clothing in America. Mr. Henry Siegel has two big stores in New York city, and one big store in Chicago, in addition to the Henry Siegel Co. of Boston, and we are able not only to command the best clothing in America, but we are able to do so at prices never duplicated by the manufacturers to our competitors.

Henry Siegel Co. are Boston agents for the celebrated Kuppenheimer clothing and show at all times a complete selection of both suits and overcoats at prices below all competition—a tailor's fit at half the tailor's price.

DEATH ENDS PROVIDENCE SALOON ROW

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 29.—As a result of a quarrel in a saloon in the Italian quarter here yesterday Natale De Marco is dead with three stab wounds in his body, while Armando Rossi is in jail and will be arraigned in court this morning charged with having committed the crime.

According to the police the two men and several others were enjoying a little Thanksgiving party in the saloon when a dispute arose. Rossi, it is said, became very boistrous and was ejected by the barkeeper.

He waited on the sidewalk and when De Marco came out, it is said, immediately attacked him with a knife, inflicting the wounds, one in the abdomen, another in the shoulder and a third in the man's left side.

De Marco was discovered by the police and hurried to the hospital, where he died at 1 o'clock this morning. Rossi was hunted up and was located hiding under the bed at his home. He was taken to the hospital, where De Marco identified him as his assailant.

KELLIHER MAKES GAINS IN WARD 7

The friends of Jeremiah F. Kelliher, in Dependence League nominee for the Common Council from Ward 7, are confident that he will be successful this year. At one time Mr. Kelliher was defeated in the ward by the narrow margin of four votes. Mr. Kelliher is a well known business man, and has always been interested in the politics of the district. He is prominent in many of the local improvement organizations and is on record as being in favor of having as up-to-date school erected in the ward for the benefit of the people.

FRENCH FLEE FROM ARABS; 11 KILLED

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Official advices received here from Oran, Algeria, declare that a part of the Moroccan army invaded Algeria. The French were forced to retreat, and in the fighting they lost eleven killed and fifteen wounded. Later, however, they were reinforced and succeeded in driving the Arabs back across the border.

FOX TUGGED AT HIS COAT TAILS

PROVIDENCE, Nov. 29.—Confidence in human nature on the part of a big brown fox received a fatal shock yesterday at the hands of Frederick Fuller of Indian Orchard. Mr. Fuller was at work cutting wood in the rear of his house and was absorbed in this pleasant task that he did not notice the approach of the fox, which came up behind him. Feeling a rug at the coat tails Fuller turned, and was apparently lured to find that a big fox had a fast hold of his coat with its teeth. The animal at the same time was gazing into the eyes of its captive.

Seizing a stick of wood, Mr. Fuller dealt the murderous blow at the head of the fox, which stretched it unconscious. He then beat it to death, and in a few seconds the pelt was ready to be removed.

2 Bottles of Munyon's 3X Rheumatism Remedy Cured Him

Mr. A. R. Potter, 4133 Brown street, West Philadelphia, who is Baggage Master, running between Philadelphia and Washington, No. 7, was paralyzed with rheumatism and helpless. Two bottles of Munyon's 3X Rheumatism Remedy cured him. Read his letter: "4133 Brown street, Philadelphia, Pa., October 1, 1907. Gentlemen: I was entirely helpless with rheumatism and could not move except with help. I tried many remedies without relief. Finally I took two bottles of Munyon's 3X Rheumatism Remedy and it completely cured me. There is nothing I am ready on earth, in my estimation, like it."

For old, chronic cases, we recommend our 3X Rheumatism Cure, which has never failed to relieve the most obstinate cases. This remedy should be used in every instance where the joints are stiff or swollen, or become chalky. It is especially recommended for those cases of Rheumatism where the kidneys and bladder are in great sympathy. It does not up in a large bottle and sells for $1.00. If you want more immediate relief, Munyon's Rheumatism Remedies will relieve almost any case in from one to three hours. Munyon's Rheumatism Remedies are sold by druggists everywhere, and if you want any special advice about your case, write to Professor Munyon, Philadelphia, Pa., and a physician will write you a special letter, telling you exactly what your trouble is and how to cure it. Remember, this remedy contains no salicylic acid, no opium, cocaine, morphine or other harmful drugs. It is put up under the guarantee of the Pure Food and Drug Act—MUNYON.

Henry Siegel Co. again are the leaders in all holiday goods sold in the men's furnishing department this season, and to the many thousands of customers who found it impossible to duplicate elsewhere the values we offered last season, we want to say that this season of this season excels anything ever attempted by any store in Boston. We have the finest line of men's bath robes in Boston at $3.50, $4.50 and $5.00, and we are also prepared to fill orders at 50c. each for 150 dozen combination sets, including suspenders, arm bands and garters, put up in neat boxes, the Christmas gift that created such a great sensation a year ago.

Sale of Sample Shirts

To-morrow the great feature of the Men's Furnishing department will be a sale of samples of $1.50 and $2.00 custom finished shirts at 98c. We are not going to say very much about these shirts, because when we do they create such a furore that we invariably run short before the demand is supplied.

$1.50 and $2.00 Values at 98c

It is sufficient to say they are custom finished, equal to any made to measure shirt you can buy at any price. We have both coat shirts and regular styles, cuffs attached or separate, and the range of patterns is unlimited, comprising both light and dark grounds, in neat and plain bosoms, guaranteed $1.50 and $2.00 values, at..... 98c

BULLETS FLY IN WILD RIOTS IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Two riots, which came near to causing several deaths, marked Thanksgiving Day and gave the police a warm time. The first occurred in the afternoon in the "San Juan Hill" district. The other involved the chase of a man for fifteen blocks at night and the shooting of a police station.

At Amsterdam avenue and sixty-second street Policeman Finn of the West Sixty-eighth street station, one of the smallest patrolmen in the department, arrested Mose Johnson, a negro, who had caused a disturbance. A horde of negroes rushed to Johnson's aid, wrenched Finn's coat sleeve and broke it, and then got Johnson free.

The fugitive ran to No. 225 West Sixty-second street and hid there. Finn, meanwhile, on his trail. The policeman was searching with negroes in a few minutes and Finn's life was imperiled.

Reserves and citizens came down in the San Juan Hill section when another fight between several white men and four negroes was precipitated at the corner of Second avenue and Amsterdam avenue.

Patrolman William Ritchie and Thomas Shannahan, both of the West Sixty-eighth street station, ran to the scene and arrested Negley, Oscar Johnson, Edward Kehoe and Frank Smith, all white.

Mob Threatens to Hang Fugitive.

Th second turbulent mass gathered at No. 7 Thompson street, where Mr. and Mrs. Michael Petrillo live with their three-year-old daughter, and where Negley rooms. It is alleged that Dellaro attacked the child and was discovered by the mother, who shrieked for help.

Dellaro ran downstairs, but the woman's cries and her frenzied, short explanation sufficed to cause the neighbors to pursue the fugitive. For exactly fifteen blocks Dellaro ran, outstripping his pursuers, who were yelling "Kill him! Hang him!"

Guns Failed to Hold Crowd.

Reserves were called and dispersed the mob, but when Dellaro, surrounded by a cordon of policemen with drawn revolvers, was taken to the Leonard street station the crowd stormed the house.

One man managed to enter and throttled the prisoner at the rail. He was thrown out but not arrested.

KIDNAP COUSIN OF ITALY'S KING

NAPLES, Nov. 29.—Without awaiting action by the civil officials, the military authorities have dispatched troops into the mountains in search of the brigands who recently kidnapped the Marquis Giuseppe Pinto, a cousin of the King of Italy, and extorted a letter from him asking a $500 ransom, and tortured him until, when found, he was at the point of death.

The Marquis's recovery is still doubtful, and in the present condition he has been unable to give assistance in directing the search. All the searchers really know is that the captive was kept in a grotto not far from Naples; that the brigands managed to escape as policemen, and that there were two or a dozen in the gang.

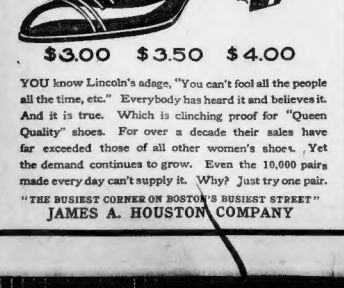
FELL 5 STORIES AND MAY LIVE

Although he fell five flights down an elevator shaft, Edward Evans of No. 58 Marlboro street, Chelsea, has excellent chances of recovery. Several ribs were fractured, he suffered concussion of the brain, nervous shock and internal injuries.

The accident happened early to-day at No. 20 Central street in a building occupied by Macdonald & Evans, printers, of which Mr. Evans is a partner.

GROTTO EMPLOYES HOLD RECEPTION

Thirty employes of Piscopo's Grotto, No. 165 Hanover street, North End, held a reception and banquet yesterday in Young's Hotel. Allen R. Frederick presided, and he party wound up witnessing "The Red Mill" at the Colonial Theatre. Included in the reception program at Young's Hotel were speeches by the following guests of honor: Dr. C. P. Chann, Joseph King, Dominick Piscopo, John E. Imperato, Mark H. Cohen and Max Wolff.



$3.00 $3.50 $4.00

YOU know Lincoln's adage, "You can't fool all the people all the time, etc." Everybody has heard it and believes it. And it is true. Which is clinching proof for "Queen Quality" shoes. For over a decade their sales have far exceeded those of all other women's shoes. Yet the demand continues to grow. Even the 10,000 pairs made every day can't supply it. Why? Just try one pair.

MOTHER OF WAR SECRETARY IS AGAIN VERY ILL

MILLBURY, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Louisa M. Taft, mother of Secretary of War Taft, is again in a serious condition at the Torrey mansion here, according to her son Horace Taft, principal of the Taft School, who has been summoned home.

To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter Mr. Taft said: "My mother is again in a serious condition, and owing to her advanced age we do not think she will recover. It is untrue, however, that the introduction of my niece, Miss Louise Taft, in New York society will be postponed because of this, as we don't entertain any immediate danger."

A message of his mother's condition has been sent to Secretary of War William H. Taft.

12-POUND HEIR TO FAVERSHAM

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Mrs. William Faversham, whose stage name is John Opp, was reported to be improved to-day after the critical illness following the appearance in the household of a twelve-pound boy. The doctors were greatly worried over her condition but said to-day that she was much better. William Faversham is in Denver and will not return to New York until Dec. 16.

Fitzgerald has the largest campaign fund ever spent to elect a Mayor of Boston.

MAINE MILLS REOPEN MONDAY

MADISON, Me., Nov. 29.—The mill of the Madison Woolen Company, which shut down Saturday for some needed repairs, will be running on full time Monday.

ARABS BATTLE WITH FRENCH; 300 ARE SLAIN

ORAN, Algeria, Nov. 29.—Heavy French reinforcements have been thrown into the field, and fierce fighting is in progress to-day along the frontier against the Beni Issaen tribesmen, who, after capturing a French outpost at Bab-el-Assa yesterday morning with a subsequent repulse and a threatening across the border, have again invaded Algeria, begun burning villages and are defying the Gallic force to check them.

Including those slain in yesterday's and to-day's fighting, the losses on both sides are estimated at 300. The Beniissen forces are not only wreaking tremendous havoc but have incited a half-dozen other tribes to revolt. The rebel strength is steadily growing, the entire frontier will soon be aflame unless the revolt is quickly suppressed and the declaration of a holy war is constantly expected.

Being reinforced, the French forces are still inadequate, and urgent calls are being sent for more men.

OPEN TUNNEL PASSAGEWAY

The tunnel which is to connect Tremont street and Washington street, through the Boston Theatre, was opened between Mason street and Washington street, fully completed for use, yesterday.

The opening to Tremont street is now made through a building backing on Mason street, directly opposite the theatre opening, and all day yesterday it was made use of by the patrons of the theatre, with much added comfort.

SURPRISE GIFT MADE TO HOSTS

John J. Sullivan of No. 5 Greenmount street, Dorchester, gave a Thanksgiving dinner dance to about 200 friends, who gathered from all parts of the city. After the dinner the host and hostess were invited out of the way while preparations were made to surprise them on their return. Mrs. Sullivan was presented with a handsome oak sideboard, and Mrs. Sullivan with a silver service. The presentation speech was made by Cornelius J. Sullivan, and, although then completely floored, returned the host made a neat and fitting speech of acceptance.

The floor was then cleared, and with music, song and dance the time sped merrily on into the early morning hours.

DESERTED WIFE JAILS HUSBAND

NORTH ATTLEBORO, Nov. 29.—Having gone to Scotland on a visit with her two children, Mrs. Annie McFarland returned to her home in Jamaica Plain a few days ago to find that she had been deserted. She traced her husband to this place, learning that he was about to leave for Seattle, and had him arrested late last night on a charge of non-support. He was arraigned in court here to-day.

McFarland, who has been working here for two weeks or so, claims that the marriage was illegal, but his wife brought with her a marriage certificate to disprove the statement.

HUNT DEATH'S GERM IN OYSTER AT CLUB DINNER

Chemists Examine Shellfish to Place Blame for Fatality After Banquet.

SEVERAL GUESTS ARE ILL

An investigation and a careful chemical and bacteriological examination is now being made into the oysters which were served at the dinner and dance at the fashionable Myopia Hunt Club at Hamilton, October 11, the eating of which is believed to have resulted in the death of Robert S. Bradley, Jr., of typhoid fever and the serious illness of several other persons who were present upon that occasion.

Almost at the same time that Robert S. Bradley, Jr., was fatally stricken, Harold S. Vanderbilt, son of William K. Vanderbilt of New York, a student at the Harvard Law School, and Miss Cecilia Stackpole of Beacon street, as well as several other persons prominent in society who had been present at the dance and dinner at the Myopia Club, were taken ill of typhoid fever.

Two of the employes of the Myopia Club, who had eaten of the oysters served to the guests at the fashionable event that evening, were also stricken with the fever following the entertainment. They are Frederick Sage and Leonard Pierce.

The Myopia Club is one of Greater Boston's most fashionable and exclusive organizations. The dance and dinner of October 11 was given by Ellis H. Hewel at the clubhouse in Hamilton. It was attended by a large and most brilliant assemblage of specially invited guests, the most prominent families in Boston, New York, Newport, Lenox and North Shore being represented.

Taken Ill After Dinner.

But a few days after the dinner and dance the officers of the Club, of which S. D. Bush is president, were notified that several of the guests upon that fashionable function had been taken violently ill of typhoid fever. This was followed by the death of young Mr. Bradley.

A quiet investigation was begun at once and one by one the edibles and dainties served that evening were examined. The milk, the water and the other things partaken of that evening were subjected to tests and found to have been pure—all but the oysters.

Now the whole investigation is directed towards the oysters which were served the guests that evening at the first course of the dinner.

It is learned that almost from the beginning of the investigation the oysters were under suspicion. The officers of the club were convinced that the water was pure and the milk had always been secured from trustworthy sources and there was no surprise that it stood all of the tests.

The investigation has narrowed down to the bivalves. It is well known by bacteriologists and physicians that oysters and other shell fish are frequently dangerous sources of contamination and the most careful and complete tests are being made to verify or disprove the grave suspicion that the oysters served to the guests of the fashionable Myopia Hunt Club at Mr. Bradley's entertainment in October were, many of them, laden with deadly typhoid fever germs, and that they were responsible for the death of Mr. Bradley and of the serious illness of Miss Stackpole, Harold Vanderbilt and the two employes of the club, Frederick Sage and Leonard Pierce.

The fact that but a few of the guests that evening were taken ill as a result of eating the oysters, while nearly all of the guests ate of the first course when the bivalves were served raw on the half shell, is explained by the belief that but a few of the lot of oysters served at the club that evening had been infected.

President Bush, of the Myopia Club, is personally directing the investigation. This is being done with the purpose of preventing, if possible, any repetition of such consequences.

Mr. Bradley was the first of the guests to be affected by the dinner. He died last Monday after a hard fight for his life at the country home of his father at Pride's Crossing. He was in his first year in the Harvard Law School.

Harold Vanderbilt has been sick at the Harvard Infirmary. He has passed the critical stage of his illness and is now thought to be on the way to early recovery.

Miss Stackpole is reported as still seriously ill at her home, No. 340 Beacon street.

MISS SHONTS TO WED DUKE IN JANUARY

HAVRE, France, Nov. 29.—The wedding of the Duke De Chaulnes and Picquigny, heir to one of the proudest titles of France, to Miss Theodora Shonts, younger daughter of President Theodore P. Shonts of the Interborough-Metropolitan Traction Company of New York, U. S. A., will take place in New York on January 26, 1908, according to the statement of the Duke, who has just arrived here from New York on the steamer Lorraine.

The wedding will be in some church on Broadway, New York city, and will be attended by at least two Dukes and Duchesses and a Prince among the De Chaulnes relatives. The Chaulnes seems very happy in the successful outcome of his long and ardent suit for the fair American actress.

In speaking of the coming nuptials the Duke said:

"My brother-in-law and my sister, the Duke and Duchess d'Uzes, will attend my marriage, the Duke d'Uzes acting as one of the witnesses. I also expect that the Duke of Luynes, with whom I am connected by blood, will be present with the Duchess de Luynes. Prince Galitzen will also attend.

"I have discussed seriously with Mr. and Mrs. Shonts the question of religion, so far as the marriage is concerned. The matter is not settled yet, but it will not prove an insuperable obstacle to the wedding."

CORPORATIONS MULTIPLY IN THIS STATE

Annual Report By Bureau of Statistics Shows Great Industrial Gain in 1906.

CAPITAL IS CENTRALIZED

An immense gain in the number of Massachusetts corporations in the year 1906 and an increasing tendency toward concentration of capital in the industries of the state is shown by the annual statistics of manufactures just issued by Charles F. Gettemy, chief of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor.

"As the number of establishments remains the same," says the report, "it will be seen that the gain in the number of private firms and the gain in the number of corporations are reciprocal, the former falling from 3,094 in 1905 to 2,979 in 1906, a decrease of 115, or 3.72 per cent, while the increase in corporations is seen to be 115, or a gain over the previous year of 6.16 per cent.

Capital Concentrating.

"The tendency to concentration of capital is to be noted in this decline in a number of private firms and the increase in the corporate form of management, and is also indicated by the number of cases where the same firm or corporation controls more than one establishment."

The increased production for all industries in the State in 1906 over 1905 amounted to $137,391,754, or 12.12 per cent. The increase in factories of boots and shoes is shown to be the leading industry, and according to the federal census, no other State approaches Massachusetts in the value of this product. The textile industry ranks next.

In 5,355 factories in 1905 there were 321,904 males and 154,501 females employed, the corresponding figures for 1906 being 346,251 males and 162,057 females. The industry employing the largest number of wage earners (99,089) is that of cotton goods. These figures do not represent all establishments, but about 90 per cent, used for purposes of comparison, and salaried employes are not included. An increase of 6.97 per cent. is found.

11 Per Cent. Increase in Wages

The total amount of wages in these plants for 1905 was $227,135,046; for 1906, $252,079,455, a gain of 10.95 per cent.

The cotton goods industry exhibits the least loss of time in 1906, the number of days in operation averaging 303.56 per establishment, as against 294.86 in 1905, an increase of 8.61 days, or 2.92 per cent. Besides cotton goods, three other of the nine leading industries in 1906 exhibit running time of over 300 days. For the nine leading industries in 1906 the increase in running time for the year amounted to 3.09 days, or 1.04 per cent. For all the industries in the aggregate an increase of 0.34 per cent. is shown.

Boston Leads in Value.

Boston leads in the value of products, with $166,145,837 for 1906, an increase of 9.88 per cent. Lynn comes next, with $67,005,753. Other figures are: Worcester, $66,206,806; Brockton, $45,080,805; Cambridge, $44,242,121; Fall River, $36,703,-011. "Of the latter sum, $73,272,700 was invested in Boston alone.

OLD HOME FOR NANCY HANKS

Nancy Hanks, once queen of the turf, is to go back to old Kentucky to spend the rest of her days in peace and quiet. She was sold at the Old Glory horse sale in New York yesterday for $1,500. The Maddens of Lexington, Ky., paid that amount for the famous old trotter that she might run no risk of falling into the possession of those who would treat her unkindly.

The mare is now twenty-one years old. When J. Malcolm Forbes bought the horse in 1891 she had a record of 2:09, but in subsequent races on the Kentucky circuit she made the mark that stood for years of 2:04 flat.

BOOM LEAGUE IN WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Nov. 29.—Enthusiasm runs high in Worcester County over the establishment of the Independents League as the second party in the State. William Crosbie, No. 2 Illinois street, of the Worcester Independents League, has filed at the City Hall papers notifying the Aldermen that the Independents League party of Worcester will hold caucuses on December 17 for nomination of members for a city committee.

The Board of Aldermen at their next meeting will consider the appointing of polling places in ten wards for the Leaguers to hold caucuses.

WINS $4,600 IN 11-DAY POKER GAME ON SEA

Winner of $4,600 in a poker game which started at Genoa, Italy, and ended seven days later when the Bonanda came into port here, Andrea Perello is the happiest member of the San Carlo Grand Opera company, which is now in Boston. The poker game averaged eight hours a day during the voyage. Ramon Blanchart, a Spanish baritone, contributed $3,000 to Perello's winnings and others who "sat in" supplied the balance of the $4,600, a small fortune for the singer. "I'd rather play poker than sing," declared the winner, "for sometimes it pays better than singing." Coming across the compass made things lively for the bonefish. Captain Bradhoff declares that the men and women sang at everything but work and when there wasn't anything else they sang at that.

It was a case of gurgle and trill all the way over, accordingto the Captain. He had never before heard so many not such a variety of sounds. Some of them sang at the waves, the gulls, and even at bits of floating wood," he said. "At no hour of the day or night was there quiet.

Among the operatic stars who arrived on the Bonanic were : Sopranos, Milly Brasnola, Tina Dossan, Jane Noria, Annita Perego; mezzo sopranos, Maria Francesca, Guglielmina Marchi, Rosa Olitska, Ernesto Giacrone, Giuseppe Oppenheim, Ramon Blanchart, Rodolfo Fornari, Adamo Galperis, Attilo Pulcini; basses, Giulio Rossi, F. de Segurola, who had charge of the party on the passage, and Luigi Ravecchi; stage officials, Andreas Perello, Luigi Albertieri, Giovanni Minchetto and Ballet Mistress Danbi Muschietto.

WESTON HAS FIRST RIDE IN AN AUTO

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Edward Payson Weston is now an auto enthusiast. Yesterday he enjoyed his first ride in an automobile, and now he threatens to give up walking. His admirers are worried. L. F. Misenheimer brought the auto to Weston's hotel yesterday and carried the aged walker to the South Shore Country Club. "It was just like sailing on the ocean," said the old man when the ride was over. "It was grand." One of his friends reminded him that a short time before he said, although he might be old-fashioned, he preferred a horse and carriage. "Oh, that was quite another matter," replied Weston.

Weston's ride in the auto not only gave him a fine appetite for his Thanksgiving dinner, but it made him enthusiastic about Chicago people, especially the women. "Chicago has the most beautiful women of the country," he declared. "I mean it," he added. "At the South Shore Country Club I shook the hands of at least 150 women and every one of them had real beauty. This lake breeze gives them a healthy glow, makes their eyes bright and their skin clear. They have an enormous amount of common sense and you can't have much beauty without common sense either." Explaining the reason for his health and strength, he said: "Always be temperate and you will be healthy and happy." At noon to-day Weston is the guest of a luncheon given by the Press Club. To-night he will be the guest of honor at a banquet by the New Illinois Athletic Club, which will also tender him a testimonial Sunday afternoon at the Garrick Theatre. "I intended to leave Chicago as soon as I arrived," he said, "but I like the place so much I don't expect to go before the middle of next week."

HOBSON'S BOY BABY NOW GETS THE KISSES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Congratulations on the arrival of his new Thanksgiving baby boy are simply inundating Lieutenant Richmond Pearson Hobson's home here. They come by every mail, by wire, by special messenger, by telephone and a lot of them are delivered in person.

What's more, practically all of the callers clamor for a chance to kiss the baby, and about half of the correspondents say they want to do the same thing the first time they see the Merchiaw hero's heir.

This is a rather sensitive subject with Lieutenant now Congressman Hobson. Osculation been were all right for a year or two after the Spanish-American War, but now he's got to be a father himself he'd like to forget his past—the kissing part of it at least.

The lieutenant says he doesn't know yet what his son will be named. Mrs. Hobson, formerly Miss Grisselda Hull of Kentucky, will make the choice.

UNITED STATES RANKS THIRD IN IMPORT VALUES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The United States ranks third among the nations in the magnitude of her imports, according to a statement published to-day by the Department of Commerce and Labor. The United Kingdom leads that with $2,981,280,000. Germany is second with $1,690,665,000, and the United States is credited with a total of $1,434,421,000, or 14.7 per cent. of the total imports of the world.

The statistics show that those countries situated geographically near to the United States draw the greater portion of their imports from us. Thus Santo Domingo and Haiti take 70 per cent. of their total imports from Uncle Sam, while Mexico, Canada, Cuba and Central and South American States show large percentages.

BAKER, OUT OF WORK, ENDS LIFE BY GAS

An unidentified baker, who was despondent because he had been out of work for three weeks, ended his life by inhaling gas early to-day in his room at 15 Canaveron street.

There was not a thing in the room except his baker's cap and apron to identify him. The door was locked and the windows tightly closed. His body was found on the bed, fully dressed, when the landlady, Mrs. Rosa Greeley, had the door broken in. Maurice Sullivan, who rooms on the floor below, first noticed the odor of gas, and notified Mrs. Greeley at 5 o'clock to-day.

The body is still there, awaiting the action of the medical examiner. The man was last seen alive at 9:45 o'clock last night.

BROKER DIES SAYING GRACE

While asking a blessing on his Thanksgiving dinner yesterday, Stanley Cunningham, formerly a Chicago broker, but recently a member of the wealthy colony at Cohasset, was stricken with cerebral hemorrhage, and fell dead at the table.

The members of the family were seated about the table, and Mr. Cunningham, in accordance with his usual custom, had begun to say grace. As he heard the end he stopped, gazed about for an instant, and then fell into the chair behind him.

He owned a beautiful house on Elm street, and was a member of the Exchange Club and of the class of '77 of Harvard.

THOUGHT BEAR WAS HUSBAND

RICHMOND, Va., Nov. 29.—Mistaking a black bear for her husband, Mrs. Addie Lother, who lives near Winchester, received the most strenuous hugging of her life, she says. At first she thought she was in the arms of her husband.

"Oh, John, your beard whiskers!" she exclaimed, without looking up, when a shaggy head brushed her cheek.

"John, you hug like a bear," she exclaimed, and twisting in the embrace she looked squarely into the face of brute.

Yes ugly beast," replied the woman, swinging her dishpan in her surprise on the animal's head. She followed up this advantage with a furious and a poker, with which she pounded him so vigorously that the surprised beast sought safety in flight.

When Lother returned home he found his wife calmly arranging her hair as if nothing had happened.

What the Old Romans Owed to the Mothers Who Inspired Them

By Rev. Thomas B. Gregory

It was about B. C. 186, and an old man, cited by the Tribunes to render an account of certain public funds, stood like a lion at bay in the Roman Forum. Taking a roll of papers from under his toga, the old man said:

"In this is contained an accurate statement of all you wish to know, but I will not insult myself by reading it to you. On this day, Tribunes of the People, and you, Romans, I conquered Hannibal and the Carthaginians. Let us go to the Capitol and thank the gods for the many favors they have vouchsafed us."

That old man was Scipio Africanus, the greatest man in Rome, the conqueror of Hannibal, and the father of Cornelia, the immortal mother of Tiberius and Caius Gracchus.

Tiberius Gracchus

TIBERIUS GRACCHUS! A name that should ever be held in sacred remembrance by all genuine lovers of the Rights of Man.

No sooner was Tiberius Gracchus made Tribune of the people than he bravely stood forth as the champion of the citizens against the grasping aristocracy and its organ, the Senate.

He would have the soil of his country owned and tilled by freemen rather than by slaves, and he was able, notwithstanding the powerful opposition that was brought against him by organized capital, to carry his point.

Laws were passed restoring the lands to the people and replacing the slave laborers by free proprietors.

For this deed of patriotism Tiberius Gracchus paid with his life. When just thirty years old he was stricken down by the grasping plutocracy he had had the hardihood to antagonize.

A little later Caius Gracchus undertook to complete the good work begun by his brother, but he, too, fell at the hands of the same conscienceless aristocracy.

Then it was that the true grandeur of Cornelia's character began to show itself. With the great weight of her woe pressing hard upon her mother's heart, she bore it without a murmur.

Much as she loved her boys—and she loved them with all her heart—she was willing to sacrifice them upon the altar of her country's welfare without repining.

She spoke of them not as having met with misfortune, but as having been highly honored in the brave doing of their duty.

The Roman Spirit

WIDOWED early in life, this Roman mother dedicated herself to her children. Egypt's proud king, Ptolemy, offered her his hand and his fortune, but she rejected the tempting offering to devote her life to the nurture of her family.

One day a rich lady visitor showed Cornelia her rare jewels, and then requested to see those of her own. Just then the children returned from school, when, throwing her arms about them, Cornelia exclaimed: "These are my jewels!"

With justice, then, does the historian assure us that, though sprung from the finest blood in Rome, the children were less ennobled by that blood than they were by the splendid nurture of their mother.

Rome killed her sons and broke her heart, but later on a statue was erected in her honor by the repentant Roman people, bearing for an inscription the words, "Cornelia, the Mother of the Gracchi."

RIGHT AND WRONG WAY FOR BUSINESS GIRLS TO DRESS

Choose Your Hats and Dresses With Discretion

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX

ARE you a business woman? Most of my girl friends are in business of some kind or other, and like all true women, whether business or working bees, they are more or less interested in dress.

There are business girls of two kinds. There is the girl who dresses for the office as though she were going to a matinee or an afternoon tea, and there is the girl who dresses modestly and sensibly and is the picture of what a business girl should look like.

The accompanying cuts illustrate the two types; on the left you see Miss Business Girl dressed as she should be; on the right you see her dressed as she most decidedly should not be.

The smart little shirt waist suit is pretty and serviceable. There are no frills nor flimsy draperies. The skirt is a modest length and yet short enough to clear the ground. The hat is becoming and in no way extreme, and the gloves are not mounted on stilts in place of heels.

Some Follies

The girl on the other side, to begin at the top, wears a most ridiculous style of hat. Business girls can't afford to run in all kinds of weather and should buy their hats with that idea in mind. The hat here shown is the kind that one puts on the right to make fun of woman's fashions.

The waist might be very pretty for home wear, but it is absolutely unsuitable for the office. It is far too dressy and conspicuous.

The skirt errs on the side of being much too short. The shoes are the kind that should be worn for dress occasions, not for street wear.

The contrast between the two girls is very sharp and I am quite sure that if the two were to apply for the same situation no employer would hesitate for an instant. He would say to himself:

"Here is a girl who looks neat and capable, and whose mind will be more on her work than on her clothes. She is the kind of girl I want in my office, not the absurdly dressed little piece of frivolity who has no idea of how a business girl should dress. I would be afraid to trust any important piece of work to that dressy young person."

Another Example

And here are still two more pictures of the business girl. Don't you think the girl in the plain dress looks far prettier and smarter than her more fussy sister? Her dress is nice enough for any little social function, and yet it is quite in place at the office. Simplicity of style is infinitely more becoming to the majority of girls than any elaborate effects. Beads and embroideries and dangling trinkets are quite unsuitable for day wear for the business girl.

Also avoid elaborate hair dressing if you want to look like a part you profess to.

Dear girls, don't think that I am talking nonsense. I know that I am voicing the sentiment of all who love and admire the business girl. She is about the finest of all our country's productions, and if she spoils her looks by foolish dressing, for one love her well enough to frankly tell her so. We are going to have another talk on this subject, so be prepared for it.

The girl who tries to dress mannishly has still to bear her little scolding, also the girl who affects the Dopey, would-be artistic style. But that is for another day.

Famous Professor Says That Mothers Should Be Pensioned

PROFESSOR CHARLES ZUEBLIN, head of the sociology department of the University of Chicago, has set women by the ears by declaring that marriage cannot be sacred until there is economic equality between husband and wife. Here are his ideas on the economic independence of woman, his suggestion for pensioning mothers, and his philosophy of marriage:

By Prof. Charles Zueblin

Professor of Sociology of the University of Chicago

SOME of our most dependent women are entirely unconscious of their dependence. This is because of the way society has been conducted in the past; we have been brought up so. Marriage is supposed to be a cheerful union—like beautiful entwining of the slender woman about the strong nature of man.

The difficulty is that one woman is depending upon the income of one man; that is, dependent upon his income exclusively. This places the woman in a dependent state, and fosters more than all else superiority. The idea is almost intolerable when you think of it. It places such a limitation upon the economic possibilities of woman.

Wives as Property

THE mass of men regard their wives as their property. One may take the tenderest care of his property, even of his dog or some other animal, but it is not the right kind of relationship for man and woman.

One of the greatest dangers of the time is that most thinking of marriage is a disparat way. Almost everything that is publicly spoken of marriage is about it, past, and the result is that people think of marriage as the end of the romance on the stage.

The ancient conception that marriages are made in heaven is wrong. Marriage is an institution of the State and cannot exist unless based upon love, which, however, has its foundation in heaven. Perhaps the majority of marriages because they have no other visible means of support, and economic dependence is the result. Marriage is primarily a physiological relationship, and its primary function is potential parenthood: that is, the birth of children.

Co-Education Aids

LUCKILY, we have mostly co-educational high schools, and co-education is distinctly class education and not popular with most people.

It often is said that co-education breeds a marriage. The co-educational school is the best place for one of the promotions of marriage, but since when has marriage become a crime? I know of no better place in the world for the promotion of social than the coöperative household.

We ought to have rigid regulations of the marriage license. It should be issued six months before the ceremony is allowed to take place. Then our marriages would be more apt to be permanent and divorces would be few. The state should establish strict engagement regulations.

There is no satisfactory marriage relationship without freedom and sacrifice, but in the past the trouble has been that man has had all the freedom and woman has shouldered all the sacrifice.

"Affinity" Idea Wrong

THE idea always has been held that every one has his affinity. But this is a grave mistake, and it is too often carried into marriage. For a few days, and even for a few months, the two may think the vision fails, for the affinity too often is taken for the real thing.

It is much better for man and woman to enter marriage with regard and esteem for each other and without love and grow to love each other than to be carried away by the affinity idea.

It is possible for a man and a woman who are not married to love others as they love others, not in the same way, but to have genuine affection for them. Human nature is large, and a man might have many genuine friends and a woman many more, many men friends. Each still might be a model husband and wife, and not for the way in which these matters are regarded now.

Only Right Basis

A MAN and woman have no right to live together if they do not love each other except for the sake of their children, and of women with their husbands for no other reason than for lack of other support. Love is the one and only thing that will maintain this institution right.

There should be a differentiation between divorce in cases where there are no children and a case where there are children. It is a business of the State to make especially difficult the separation of those who have children.

Every mother, whether rich or poor, should be pensioned annually, say $10 a month for each child up to the third and a decrease in the amount up to the fifth child, when it should cease. In spite of the fact that many still would have one or two children and others would take a chance on a dozen.

FISH CAKES

One-half pound of cold boiled potatoes, any scraps of cold fish you may have, the yolks of two eggs and the white of one, one ounce butter, one tablespoon milk, pepper, salt and a little chopped parsley. Take every bit of skin and bone from the fish, mix with it the parsley, pepper and salt, melt the butter, add the milk, then the potatoes. Mix all together with the yolk of one egg, without smashing the fish too much. Heat up an egg on a plate, make a fat bread crumbs, flour your board well. Form the mixture into round cakes with a little flour, then brush them over with egg and crumbs and fry in hot fat. They are done when a golden brown.

LILY CAKE

One cup of sugar, one-half cup butter, one-half cup sweet milk, one-half cup cornstarch, two cups flour, two teaspoons cream of tartar, one-half teaspoon soda, the whites of three eggs. Bake in a stiff froth and added last; flavor as you like. I bake mine in a round tin (in the tube) funnel in the centre; ice if you wish; this is excellent.

MRS. MARY M. BRADBURY.

CHILDREN'S SPONGE CAKE

One and one-half cups flour, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup sugar, one egg broken into a cup and filled with sweet milk. Stir all together in a mixing bowl; beat hard for five minutes and bake about ten minutes in muffin pan.

Handy Things for Housewives to Know

WASH your cut glass or crystal in warm soapsuds, rinse in warm water, then cover with clean, coarse sawdust for ten minutes, after which brush it lightly with a clean, soft camel's hair brush. Avoid extremes of temperature in handling cut glass articles, and under no circumstances put them in the refrigerator.

Camphor for Mosquitoes

TO keep away mosquitoes dip a piece of sponge or flannel in camphorated spirits and tack it to the top of the bedstead.

Funnel in Juicy Pie

TO replacement or any juicy pie insert a pastry chimney or funnel in upper crust, and there will be no more trouble over a leaky pie.

For Kitchen Walls

To clean the kitchen walls after using a coal oil or gasoline stove, as well as a gas plate, put a scant teacup of baking soda into a pail of cold water, after having dissolved the soda in hot water. After washing the walls with this solution rub them with a flannel rag dipped in boiled oil, and they will look as if newly painted.

Buttons Won't Break

Pearl buttons on washing blouses and children's smocks, etc., are continually being broken in the weekly wash. Mothers would find a great deal of labor if, instead of using pearl buttons, they covered ordinary linen buttons with the same material as the garment is made from. They look much prettier and last as long as the garment.

Prepared dyes are used at home with complete success, and they make possible a wonderful variety of colors. Every clothing will dye black that will dye at all, but a black dress is always useful and unobtrusive.

* * *

For a girl who takes pride in having a pretty bedroom, a bedroom set painted soft French gray, with Louis weave cane seats, with trimmings of French gilt design, is very dainty. The chiffonier, dressing table and bureau tops are of white bolton mirror, a heavy French plate glass covering. A swinging full-length mirror for any of the necessary accessories. White galatea with border of small designed cretonne makes very effective curtains.

"THE TURN OF THE BALANCE" By Brand Whitlock

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

THE formal questions were put and answered to Eades's satisfaction; then came the real question:

"Are you opposed to capital punishment?"

"Yes, sir; I am."

"Are your scruples conscientious ones?"

"Yes, sir."

"And not to be overcome."

Just then Glassford, impatient of all these scruples he was hearing so much about, whirled on Holden, who sat next Holden turned; his blue eyes met those of Glassford.

"You don't want to sit on this jury, do you?" demanded Glassford.

"No, sir."

"It would interfere with your business," wouldn't it?"

"No, sir."

"It wouldn't? You earn good wages, don't you?"

"I'm out of a job now, sir."

"Well, are your principles such that you can't lay them aside long enough to do your duty as a citizen?"

Holden flushed.

"I can't lay them aside, no; but it doesn't follow that I don't do my duty as a citizen."

"But," began Glassford in his tone of legal argument, "assuming that the law as it is should be altered, nevertheless, knowing the law, can you lay aside your private views and perform your duty duly by applying this law to a given state of facts as the court instructs you? You understand me, do you?"

"I understand perfectly, sir."

"Well, what do you say?"

"I have no private views that are not public ones; I can't see any distinction. I say that I would not take an oath that might oblige me to vote to kill a man."

The atmosphere became tense.

"But assuming you had taken an oath, would you rather break that oath than discharge your duty?"

"I wouldn't take such an oath."

"Then you place your private opinions above the law, do you?"

"In this instance, I do. I don't believe in that law. And I don't believe in enforcing it."

"You mean"—Glassford was plainly angry—"that you refuse to take an oath to enforce a law you didn't believe in?"

"That's just what I mean, sir."

Glassford looked an instant at Holden as if trying to make out if he had better do with him for these heresies. Holden's blue eyes met his steadily, they returned Glassford's gaze, seeming scarcely to wink. And just then Eades, feeling the effect of the man's scruples on the jury, thought best to relieve the situation.

Challenged!

"We submit a challenge for cause," he said.

"Allowed," Glassford snapped. "We don't want such men as you on juries."

He whirled about in his chair, turned his back on Holden, and as Holden walked directly from the room, the eyes of all followed him, with a strange interest in a man who was considered unfit for jury service because he had principles he would not forego.

"Samuel Walker," called Gard.

An aged, doddering man tottered to the chair. He scarcely spoke in answer to Eades's questions; when he did, it was in a weak, quavering voice of senility. He had no occupation, knew none of the lawyers, had no knowledge of the case, had neither formed nor expressed opinions, and had no scruples against capital punishment.

"You believe that the law should be executed and upheld?" said Eades in an insinuating tone.

"Heh?" said the old man, leaning forward with an open palm behind his hairy ear.

Eades repeated the question and the feeble nodded.

Marriott turned in disgust from this stupid, senile man who was accepted, as impatiently as Glassford had turned from the intelligent man who was disqualified. And then, just as Walker was making for the jury box, Marriott used his last peremptory challenge.

A moment later he saw his mistake. Gard was calling a name he knew.

"William A. Broadwell."

The short Winter afternoon was closing in. For half an hour shadows had been stealing wearily through the room; the spectators had become a blurred mass, the jurymen lounging in the box had grown indistinct in the gloom. For some time the green shade of the electric lamp on the clerk's desk had been glowing, but now, as Broadwell crept forward, the old bailiff, shuffling across the floor, suddenly switched on the electricity, and group by group, cluster by cluster, the bulbs sprang into light, first in the ceiling, then on the walls, then about the judge's bench. There was a touch of the theatre in it, for the lights seemed to have been switched on to illuminate the entrance of this important man.

Questionings

His was sworn and took the witness chair, which he precisely filled, and clasped his white hands across his round paunch with an air that savored of piety and devotion. The few gray hairs glistening at the side of his round bald head gave it a tonsured appearance; fat encircled his neck, rested on his chin, giving at the side of his round bald head swelling on his clean-shaven, monkish cheeks, failing in folds like dewlaps over his linen collar.

He was forth with satisfaction, breathing heavily, making no movement, except-ing as to the thin lips, which moved rapidly as he talked, to adjust them more and more perfectly to what he considered the proper expression. Broadwell Marriott was utterly sick at heart. For he knew William A. Broadwell, his fellow-former, eminently respectable, a server on committees, a deacon, with certain cheap honors of the church; kind, a Pharisee of the Pharisees.

In his low solemn voice, pursing his lips nicely after each sentence as if his own words tasted good to him, Broadwell answered Eades's questions; he had no opposition to capital punishment, indeed, he added quite gratuitously, he believed in supporting it; he had great veneration for the law, and—oh, yes, he had read accounts of the murder; read them merely because he considered it a citizen's duty to be conversant with affairs of the day, and he had formed opinions as any intelligent man must necessarily.

"But you could lay aside those opinions and reach a conclusion based purely on evidence, of course, Mr. Broadwell?"

"Oh, yes, sir," said Broadwell, with an unctuous smile that deprecated the idea of his being influenced in any but the best manner.

He was thoroughly satisfied with Mr. Broadwell, Your Honor, said Eades.

"Any questions, Mr. Broadwell?" began Marriott.

Glassford looked at Marriott the surprise he felt at his presumption, and Marriott felt an opposition in the room. Broadwell shifted slightly, pursed his lips smugly and looked down on Marriott with his wise benevolence.

"Mr. Broadwell, you say you read the accounts of the tragedy?

"Yes."

"Did you read them all?"

"I believe so."

"Read the report of the evidence given on the preliminary hearing?"

"Yes."

"Read the editorials in the Courier?"

Not Biased!

"You respect its opinions?"

"I do, yes."

"Your pastor preached a sermon on this case, did he not."

"He made applications of it in an illustrative way."

"Quite edifying, of course?"

Marriott knew he had made a mistake, but the impulse to have this fling had been irresistible. Broadwell bowed coolly.

"And all these things influenced you?"

"Yes."

"Exactly. And on them you have formed an opinion respecting the guilt or innocence of the young man?"

Broadwell cast a hasty sidelong glance at Glassford, as if this had gone quite far enough, but he said patiently:

"Yes."

"And it would require evidence to remove that opinion?"

"I presume it would."

"You know if it would, don't you?"

"Yes."

"We submit a challenge for cause, Your Honor," said Marriott.

Glassford turned to Broadwell with an air that told how speedily he would make an end of this business.

"You have talked with none of the witnesses, Mr. Broadwell?"

"Oh, no, sir," said Broadwell, smiling at the absurdity.

"The accounts you read were not stenographic reports of the evidence?"

"No, sir; abstracts, rather, I should say."

"Exactly. Were the conclusions you came to opinions or mere impressions?"

"Mere impressions, I should say, Your Honor."

"Are you to be dignified by the name of opinions?"

The Very Man

"Hardly, Your Honor."

"If they were, you could lay them aside and try this case on its merits, basing your judgment on the evidence as it is adduced, and on the law as the Court shall declare it to you?"

"Certainly, Your Honor."

Glassford turned away.

"If the Court," he said, "had any doubts in his matter they would be resolved in favor of the defendant, but the Court has not the slightest knowledge of Mr. Broadwell and of his standing in the community leads me to declare that he is the very man for such important service, and the Court feels that we are to be congratulated on having him to assist us in trying this case. The challenge is overruled. You may take your seat in the jury box, Mr. Broadwell."

Glassford consulted his notes; the peremptory challenges were all exhausted now.

"The jury will rise and be sworn," he said.

TO BE CONTINUED.

What Letter Is This?

ANSWER.

ONE of those puzzle pictures is published daily in the BOSTON AMERICAN. Twenty dollars in prizes will be awarded weekly for the best answers.

The list of prizes will be divided as follows:

First prize	$10
Second prize	5
Five prizes of $1 each	5
Total	$20

Cut out the puzzle picture each day, write your answer on it and mail it in an envelope addressed to the Puzzle Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN, No. 80 Summer street, with your best suggestion as to what you would like to see in the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Where lists are equally correct the prizes will be given to those making the best suggestion.

The list of prize-winners of last week's contest, together with the final picture in this week's series, will be published in next SUNDAY'S BOSTON AMERICAN.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

KEEP ON AS YOU ARE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am acquainted with a young lady of my own age for more than a year, but relations have been of a friendly character, but of late there has grown in my affection toward each other. Am at present practicing medicine, and two and a half years more before completion, and she is studying for music. (We have met before completion). Now, by way of going out we exchange a few words, and by writing or visiting each other, and we have had no quarrels, and I would not like to be estranged from each other. This matter has gone so far advanced, and under the circumstances thus related I now wish and seek counsel as to my further action in the matter.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

YOU are both very young, and my advice to both of you is to keep on with your studies. When you have finished your law course and have some definite prospects it will be time enough to talk seriously of becoming engaged. You might tell your parents that you hope to become engaged at some future date. In the meantime study hard. See each other as often as possible, but not enough to let it interfere with your work.

TELL YOUR MOTHER

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am seventeen years old. About seven months ago I met a young man who came to board with us. He is about fifteen years old, a perfect gentleman in every respect. He asked my mother if I could accompany him to a concert. Mother assented, and since then I have been out nearly every night with him at least twice a week. He has an aunt and cousin living in a nearby suburb. He took me to see them several times, and they are very fond of me. Mother and she is very much pleased

LABOR; OR, THE MONEY-GOD! WHICH?

BY CHARLES FELTON PIDGIN

CHAPTER VI.
An Intruder

"WHAT a morning of surprises," was Huldah's thought, as she turned and faced the intruder. She surveyed him critically from his shining silk hat to his equally shining shoes, and then remarked in a tone far removed from polite:

"I wasn't talking to you, sir."

Mr. John Carpenter proceeded to hang his overcoat carefully over the back of a chair, placed his hat upon the table, and deposited his traveling bag upon the floor before he replied: "Excuse me, miss, but I presume your words were addressed to the individual whom I saw tearing down the steps as I came up the path."

"Tearing down the steps," cried Huldah. "He left enough for you to come up on, it seems."

As she spoke she moved away from him. Mr. Carpenter thought: "She's sharp; must sharpen up a bit myself." Turning to Huldah, he said: "My dear young lady, I beg pardon for my evidently unwelcome intrusion. Arriving by an early train, I had to amuse myself during the interval by sitting or eating thus inopportunely. I am an old friend of the family, but have usually visited at their city residence. The cool, shady path invited me, or I should have gone to the front door. I trust I have not incommoded you greatly. I will wait in the garden a while." He took his hat from the table.

"I suppose, sir,—you have come to see Mr. Melton."

"Not Mr. Melton alone. He and his greatest treasure."

"His nephew?"

"No. Miss, not his wife, but his daughter."

"She don't up yet. I'm her maid. I'll tell her you are here as soon as she rings for me."

A Difference in Kisses

Mr. Carpenter's thoughts were busy: 'Her maid. For country use. Not much like the adorable Francine in the city. But this one is sharp, shrewd and pretty."

"Your name, sir, if you please," was Huldah's request.

"Before I give it let me again ask pardon for my imprudent words to you. I thought you were a visitor here. Let's kiss and make up."

Mr. Carpenter put his arm around Huldah, and tried to kiss her, but she pushed him away, violently.

"Impudent words, yup mean. You wouldn't try to make up in such a way if you really thought I was what you call a lady."

"You're too particular."

Huldah answered this ungentlemanly remark with red cheeks and flashing eyes.

"Yes, I am particular. I have heard that foreign lords make a practice of kissing servants, and I suppose you would feel easily with them if you became so easily nervous as to turn up your trousers when it rains in London. If you were a gentleman you would know that the person of an American working girl is as sacred as that of any lady in the land."

"Pray! But you must be a princess, and belong to the blood royal."

"I don't know what you mean, but my blood is roiled, and will be every time I see you."

Huldah's antagonism attracted instead of repelling Mr. Carpenter. He was determined now to come off victor, and he made a vigorous attempt to embrace her.

"Go away! Go away from me, you apology for a gentleman, or I'll scream."

Confronted by Fiance

"I'll stop your cries with a kiss."

Huldah faced him, defiantly: "You just touch me and see if I don't yell as loud as I can."

Mr. Carpenter advanced toward her, but Huldah ran behind a chair, then around the table several times; finally she darted toward the door which led into the garden and, as she opened it, was confronted by Mr. Thomas Potter. She recoiled, astonished, but recovering herself, exclaimed: "Where did you come from, Mr. Potter?"

Mr. Carpenter walked to the window and looked out, whistling a comic opera air in a low key.

Tom kept his eyes on Carpenter, while answering Huldah's inquiry. "I got way down to the mills, but when I put my hand in my pocket there was enfolded key wasn't there. I came back, looking everywhere"—he glanced toward the table—"there they are now, under the table—it looks as though it had been moved from where it was. He picked up the keys, and then asked: "Say, what was that young fellar about, eh?"

"Nothing."

"I know better. You look sheepish, and he's afraid to look me square in the face. What was he trying to do? I've a right to know. Can't you trust me, Huldy?"

This appeal was too much, and Huldah began to cry.

Between her sobs she managed to say: "He—tried—to—kiss—me."

"He's a man of sense. But he's no business stealing my fruit." As he removed his coat he said loud enough for Mr. Carpenter to hear: "I'll dust his coat for him."

"No, no, Tom," cried Huldah—"please don't. He's Miss Myrtle's young man, and ain't afraid of him."

Apology—Not Money

"Nor I, neither, Huldy." Tom placed his hand on Mr. Carpenter's shoulder. "Here, you, young feller."

Mr. Carpenter stared at him in a supercilious way. "Were you addressing your remarks to me?"

"Yes, I was undressing. What have you been bothering this young lady for? What did you try to kiss her for?"

"Is that any of your business?"

"Do you hear that, Huldy? Any of my business? I should think it was. This young lady is to be Mrs. Thomas Potter."

Mr. Carpenter looked at the young couple quizzically: "Ah! I see now. I wasn't aware the young lady's affections were permanently engaged. I'm very sorry."

Tom saw the other side of the question: "Well, I suppose you knew your affections were engaged to Miss Myrtle. What'll you do after marriage if you act this way afore?"

Huldy interposed: "Don't say any more about it, please, Tom. He didn't like me after all."

"No, darn him, but he meant to. I've incommoded you greatly. I will walk in the garden a while." He took his hat from the table.

Mr. Carpenter now realized that there might be a serious side to his escapade.

"No, I beg you will not. I will pay you to keep silent." He took out a well-filled pocketbook.

"Name your price for my little pleasantry, and it shall be paid."

According to Tom Potter

Tom grew indignant. "Mr. What's-your-name, I could have excused you for trying to kiss Huldy, for I suppose she is mighty sweet, but when you offer me money to pay for it, you show you meant it for an insult and not for fun. God knows, I want money, but I haven't got so low yet as to sell my future wife's kisses. Young man, you've got to do the handsome thing."

"How?" asked Mr. Carpenter, realizing that he had struck a human hornet's nest. "You must apologize," said Tom sternly. "You must apologize to Huldy and us."

"I acknowledge I tried to kiss this young lady."

Huldy interjected, snitefully: "But you didn't."

Tom added: "No, sir, you didn't come it. Put that in your apology."

Mr. Carpenter bowed: he saw an ancient but effective way of settling the difficulty. His opponent, Mr. Potter, looked as if offering that money. The 'pology didn't say nothing about that."

To Be Continued.

AS OTHERS THINK

Everyone in Boston Has a Right to His Own Opinion.

While everyone has a right to his own opinion, yet it is wise to always consider what others think and profit by their experience.

Nothing makes life so miserable, or interferes so widely with the usefulness of the average American, as indigestion, and it is well for us to give fair consideration to what others think about this remarkable affliction.

Many people, from their own experience, are positive that Mi-o-na stomach tablets are an absolute cure for indigestion and the many disagreeable symptoms that follow this disease, such as distress after eating, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, dizziness, flatulence, nervousness and debility.

The way Mi-o-na is sold, on a guarantee to refund the money unless it cures, shows plainly the value of this remedy. There will be no charge whatever for Mi-o-na unless you are satisfied that it has relieved you of indigestion.

Mi-o-na wakens up the stomach muscles and strengthens them so that they take care of all the food you eat in a natural, healthy way, without pain or distress after meals.

Mi-o-na is sold by druggists everywhere for 50 cents, and we positively guarantee to refund your money should you purchase a box and be dissatisfied with results. Write for free sample, addressing Booth's Mi-o-na, Box 977, Buffalo, N. Y.

A Voice From The Stomach

A Bloodless Fight Between a Tablet and a Habit—The Tablet Wins.

At the age of 22 Clarence had good digestion. He had gastric juice that could dissolve doughnuts and turn apple skins to good blood corpuscles.

At the age of 24 he began to be profuse about the wrist and lean backwards. He also began to cultivate several chins. In his new-found pride he began to think it his duty to gorge himself on everything, the good and the bad, for appetite feeds on appetite—and every good thing is abused.

His picture showed that he took on weight after he put his collar on.

At the age of 26 Clarence married and went to boarding. On top of all this he attended oyster suppers and wine dinners, which reduced the size of his collar from 16½ to 15. With still abiding faith in the strength of his stomach he gulped his meals and chewed them afterwards.

At the age of 28 Clarence began to hear an inward voice—a warning from the stomach. After each meal he would feel bloated—and belching became a habit.

He began to be a light eater—and a heavy thinker. He tried to think out a cure, for now he would sit down at his meals absolutely disgusted at the thought or sight of anything to eat.

He would sit down at his meals without the trace of an appetite, just because it was time to eat.

He would often feel a gnawing, unsatisfied "still-hungry" feeling in his stomach, even after he was through eating, whether his meal was well cooked or not.

And he suffered a good many other things with his stomach that he could not explain, but that made him grouchy, miserable, out-o'-sorts and generally sour on everybody and everything.

Finally he read an account, something like this, about the truly wonderful results obtained from Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets in all cases of stomach trouble, dyspepsia, and so on. He bought a 50c box at the drug store, and took the whole box. When he started he had little faith—and less appetite. When he finished he had absolute faith—and more appetite and more good cheer. Things began to taste different and better to him.

Now he has no more dyspepsia, no more indigestion, no more loss of appetite, brash, irritation, burning sensation, heartburn, nausea, eructations, bad memory, or loss of vim and vigor.

Remember, one ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest for you 3,000 grains of food, just as it did for Clarence.

This relieves your stomach of the work of digesting until your stomach can get strong and healthy again. Your stomach has been overworked and abused. It's fagged out. It needs a rest.

Let Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets do the work of your stomach. You will be surprised how fine you'll feel after eating and how lusciously good everything will taste to you.

Heed the call of the stomach now! There's a world of good cheer in one box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets,—at any drug store, 50c.

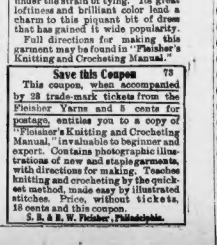
THE FLEISHER'S WORSTED YARNS

Whether you want Knitting Worsted, Saxony, Germantown, Shetland Floss, Spanish or Ice Wool, etc., be sure the Fleisher trade-mark ticket is on every skein. It is placed there for your protection. It is a personal pledge of quality. A substitute may mean failure. Insist on seeing the Fleisher trade-mark and be sure.

For sale at most good stores. If your dealer does not carry them, ask him to order them for you. He will do so if you insist.

Grandmother Recommends the Fleisher Yarns

"Taking my grandmother's advice, I used the Fleisher Yarns for my sweaters last year. They are still as good as new, because the Fleisher Yarns do not shrink nor become matted after washing. I have also knitted two beautiful scarfs of the delicate colors that are still soft and pliable, not as yet becoming stringy as shawls made from some yarns do in short time." Miss —, Jamaica, N. Y.



Crocheted Nubia

Requires 6 skeins of Fleisher's Dresden Saxony. This is a very fine and elastic yarn that enables the nubia to keep its lace shape and softness, even under the strain of tying. Its great loftiness and brilliant color lend a charm to this piquant bit of dress that has gained it wide popularity.

Full directions for making this garment may be found in "Fleisher's Knitting and Crocheting Manual."

ROSS IS PUT TO SLEEP IN THE SECOND ROUND

A fight apperant to the jaw ended the career of Tony Ross, the New Castle, Pa., giant, in the second round in the fistic entertainment in which he appeared with Jim Barry, the Chicago slugger, at the Windsimmere A. C. It was a battle of the heavies, and its short duration was the only unsatisfactory part of the sport, but when the third minute was on there was plenty of action to arouse the most rabid fan.

Ross was big. He scaled close to the 200-pound weight and had it on Barry by over a dozen pounds, but Barry had it on him several ways when it came to the slapping end of the game. Ross was too ponderous. He had an extra layer of beef which he could have dispensed with, especially around the belt region, while Barry was perfectly trimmed to meet any foe in his class. But Ross could hit like a sledge hammer, and Barry was wise not to let him land. He was careful not to get within range, as he knew what the consequence would be if he connected. But Ross's form was off several points. He went after Barry with elephantine rushes, trying to crush him with the force of his weight, but the Chicago man was nimble on his feet for a big fellow and was getting inside with his ammunition.

Ross Out in the Second.

The end came suddenly in the second after they had been tearing off some hammering in the middle of the ring. Both were in close and Ross left an opening just the kind Barry had been waiting for. With all his force he zipped an uppercut to the point of the jaw and whipped over his left. Ross tumbled and was dazed as he got up after taking the full count. He was a mark for Barry, who simply measured him and shot over another right to the Jaw and over the Pennsylvania miner went again. Once more he arose to get the same kind of medicine, and he sprawled on his back and stayed there till carried to his corner by his seconds.

Ross made good in the opening round and pounded on the body with some left hooks which threatened to stave in Barry's ribs, but Barry was paying strict attention to Ross's openings and was swinging over rights to the sensitive spot and occasionally driving one stinging right to the body.

Whenever Barry landed Ross smiled, and he had plenty of chances to spread his features. Ross was evidently starting in to wear Barry down by tearing at his body, but his clumsy footwork gave Barry a chance to slip away or block the lead.

It looked bad for Ross at the start of the second round, as Barry was feinting rapidly for the jaw and let fly a left swing, which landed with good effect. Barry also copped him with a right as he was bounding in, but it failed to stop his willingness till an instant later when Barry brought up his right from his waist line and started Ross on his nap.

Willie Riley of South Boston took on Jack Egan of Philadelphia in the semifinal and was pushing the round when he put one to the jaw in the second and Egan took the count, the bell coming at the right time. Egan refused to continue, as he injured his hand and put it out of commission.

HOW HOLIDAY BOUTS RESULTED.

SAN FRANCISCO—Al Kaufman bested Jack Terry; Sullivan and was given the decision; 25 rounds.

BUFFALO—Jimmy Quill gained decision over Young Donahue; 12 rounds; Billy O'Brien and Billy Sullivan drew; six rounds; Billy Kirkland defeated Joe Kelly; nine rounds.

JEVNE BADLY BEATEN.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 29.—In the thirty-third game of the tournament for the three-cushion billiard championship, G. Horgan of Elmira, N. Y., defeated Lloyd Jevne of Chicago, 50 to 27. Horgan's high run was 5, average 82; Jevne's high run 3, average 48.

ABE ATTELL AND OWEN MORAN WILL FIGHT TO FINISH FOR THE FEATHERWEIGHT TITLE

BY TAD.

Abe Attell and Owen Moran will sign up in a day or so to fight to a finish for the featherweight championship of the world.

Jim Coffroth, the Western promotor, who has charge of Moran on his Western trip, is arranging to hold the fight, and will use his arena at Colma for the great battle, which he expects to pull off on New Year's afternoon. Charley Harmon, who is Moran's manager, is now communicating with Coffroth in regard to the splitting of the purse and the amount of forfeit.

What a great international battle it will be. Moran has the edge since he has stopped Frankie Nell, and was the first boy in the world to do the trick. There never was a toucher had to stop than this same Nell. When you stop to think that he knocked Dick Hyland cold, knocked Harry Forbes cold and fought Eddie Hanlon until neither one nor his opponent could lift an arm, you will realize what a tough kid he was.

Moran has won his spurs, and it is now up to the wizard of the ring, Abe Attell, to stop this British cyclone. Attell has never fought a finish battle in his life. It will be a new thing for Abe, and he will probably change his tactics a bit when he faces Moran.

Around the country there are few who concede Moran even a chance to draw with Attell, but many in Britain who saw him beat Nell will go down in the sack for a few on the day of the battle.

Both are legitimate featherweights. If anything, Moran is the smaller of the pair. He has always fought small men, while Attell has beaten lightweights with the same ease in which he disposed of featherweights.

What other featherweights could top with Aurelia Herrera?

What other fellow could put Battling Nelson through a gruelling six-round go as Attell did?

Could any little fellow of 122 take Eddie Hanlon through twenty rounds and batter him up so that he resembled an eggplant more than anything else?

Coach Smith expects to get the men on Franklin Field at 3:30 till 4:30 for signal practice to-day.

The Cadets after supper last night held a very enthusiastic meeting in the Cadet barracks, the entire battalion being present. Captain Smithers, the head coach, in a very interesting address, reviewed football as West Point has played it in the beginning. Bob Forbes and Captain Neily also gave a short football talk, and all the coaches and the scrubs who attended were given the academy yell.

"A very confident feeling is evident at the military academy that the Cadets will again assume supremacy over the Navy at Philadelphia to-morrow, and the Army adherents here are eager to place their money on their favorites, with few takers.

NAVY BOYS ARE IN FINE SHAPE FOR BIG GAME

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 29.—The Navy football squad left here for Philadelphia this morning, and will have a chance to run through signals and get acquainted with Franklin Field in the afternoon.

Head Coach Reeves gave out a tentative lineup and it will hold good unless something unforeseen happens. It is: De Mott, l. e.; Northcraft, l. t.; Meyer, l. g.; Billinglaff, c.; Wright, r. g.; Leighton, r. t.; Dague, r. e.; Lange, q. b.; Douglas, l. h. b.; Reifsnider, r. h. b.; Jones, f. b.

It is felt that the most possible has been done by Reeves and his assistants, that a good team has been developed and that the chances for another victory over the Army are excellent. Captain Douglass says: "If luck breaks half even we shall win."

Reeves said that there was a possibility of change in the arrangement of players before the game, but that the team was pretty well shaken down and only something out of the ordinary would cause a change. The pieces of the three men that were considered doubtful up to the present week are Jones, fullback; Reifsnider, right halfback, and Leighton, right

ARMY CADETS SURE OF VICTORY OVER NAVY

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 29.—Accompanied by coaches and trainers, a squad of forty Army football players left town at 7:30 this morning over the West Shore road for Philadelphia. As usual the Army headquarters will be at the Bellevue-Stratford.

TICKLE HAD LITTLE TO BE THANKFUL FOR

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 29.—In one of the best bouts ever witnessed in this city and before one of the greatest holiday crowds on record, Joe Wagner of New York knocked out Bobbie Tickle in the ninth round of what was scheduled to be a fifteen round go.

The blow was a left to the stomach, which followed a perfect storm of lefts and rights to the face and neck.

The men started off at a wicksind pace, with the honors in the early part in favor of the local lad. After a few rounds, however, the New York lad struck his stride and it was only a question of gameness that kept the pride of Rantucket on his feet.

Two preliminaries were pulled off and both ended in knockouts.

JEVNE BADLY BEATEN.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 29.—In the thirty-third game of the tournament for the three-cushion billiard championship, G. Horgan of Elmira, N. Y., defeated Lloyd Jevne of Chicago, 50 to 27. Horgan's high run was 5, average 82; Jevne's high run 3, average 48.

PENN OUTPLAYS CORNELL AT ALL POINTS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Cornell's kickers never had a chance with Penn in their annual clash on Franklin Field. The score, 12 to 4, hardly shows the all-round superiority of the Quaker team as it played. In the first half the Pennsylvanians three times had the ball inside Cornell's five-yard line before they scored, twice being penalized for holding and once losing the ball on downs.

Then they scored a touchdown, making a steady advance of 65 yards, aided by one successful onside kick and a 23-yard run by Draper.

In the second half, after Cornell had pushed ahead to Penn's 10-yard line through Watson's remarkable forward passing, and the last attempt had sent the ball into a pair of Quaker arms almost on the goal line, Penn, looked out of danger. Cornell fumbled on its second rush, and Draper, getting the ball, ran unmolested for a touchdown, covering 75 yards and making the victory sure for Penn.

Cornell did not score until within two minutes of the end of the second half, when Caldwell dropped a goal from the field from the 31 yard line.

M'LEAN SAYS FRENCH BIKER IS A WONDER

Although Hugh MacLean defeated Louis Darragon, the French cyclist, in three straight heats at the Park Square Rink, the local biker says the Frenchman, as soon as he is in form, will be a wonder.

MacLean rode against him and displayed his old form. While he was never in great danger of defeat, he said after the race: "This man Darragon beats anything I ever went up against. With a little training he will be the hardest man in the world to defeat."

In the five-mile heats MacLean won the first by ninety yards, the second by sixty yards and the third by forty years.

In the mile professional race, Joe Fogler, by working a clever combination stunt with Jimmy Moran, captured the final heat quite handily.

The Connolly brothers won the first and second places in the final heat of the one-mile handicap amateur race.

HUB BOXERS DRAW.

SOUTH BERWICK, Me., Nov. 29.—Freddie O'Brien and Young Ryan, both of Boston, went six rounds to a draw at the boxing exhibition in Young's Park. In the preliminary Kid Sullivan of Dover scored a victory over Kid Victor of Boston.

KLOBY KEPT QUILL BUSY

LAWRENCE, Nov. 29.—At the Unity Cycle Club, before a large crowd, Young Kloby of Lawrence and Tommy Quill of Brockton fought ten rounds of good swift work. The men had agreed that the fight would be of ten rounds, and if both men were on their feet at the end that the bout was to be declared a draw. Quill had advantage of weight and reach while Kloby was the more aggressive, doing some very effective work to the end.

In the preliminaries Scotty Methee won over Kid Terrio in six rounds.

Cecil Mercier of Lawrence substituted for Denny Ryan of Boston, winning over Frank Paul of Albany, N. Y.

DELMONT IN THE SEVENTH

MANCHESTER, Nov. 29.—It took Al Delmont of Boston seven rounds to knock out Kid Dufresne of Lewiston. A right swing behind the ear did the trick.

The bout between Denny Ryan of Cambridge and Young Grifo of this city was stopped in the third, Grifo being unable to continue. Young Barry of this city backed out of his fight with Kid Lakeer.

TOMMY QUILL IS GIVEN DECISION OVER DONAHUE

Tommy Quill, the fiery fighter from Brockton, was awarded the decision over Young Donahue, the pride of Roxbury, at the end of twelve rounds of vigorous milling at the Cooper A. C.

That Quill got all the best of the decision was the general impression of the holiday fans who crowded the ringside. He showed some spectacular work by being physically stronger than Donahue, but was outscored and was no comparison in cleverness with the Roxbury boy.

With extra weight and reach Quill had all the best of it in comparison with Donahue, and the latter was further handicapped by getting his eye split open and his right was impaired by his best work.

In many of the rounds Quill tore at Donahue like a wild animal, trying to force the local boy by a whirlwind attack. Donahue blocked most of his leads and seldom let him tire himself out and then proceeded to land him a few telling jabs or snapped over warm rights to the head.

Quill was like a longshoreman in action aside of Donahue, bulling in without regard to his own defense, making it easier to be scored on.

Donahue Earned a Draw.

Donahue earned a draw by his shiftiness in meeting the bulling tactics of his opponent, whose aggressiveness was his chief attractiveness, but he was made to slow up in this respect after a lively spurt.

There was a scare in Donahue's camp in the opening round when Quill started off like a cyclone and smothered the Roxbury boxer with rights and lefts to the jaw, but he pulled through and failed to show any effects of the beating when the second round was called, and more than evened up his end in the next three rounds.

He bothered Quill a lot by springing his loop-the-loop punch in the clinches and kept Quill bobbing his head and had him generally worried.

In the fifth and sixth rounds Donahue showed up Quill in grand style, getting inside and plastering him with jabs and uppercuts.

Quill was slow starting the seventh and seemed to be weary, but Donahue soon settled him with straight jabs and hooks, and before the bell Quill was taking it on the ring, but connecting principally with the fist.

Donahue kept leading in the eighth, putting right and left to the body when he had Quill covering up to avoid the stinging wallops. At the bell Quill got over a lucky right.

Some Hot Exchanges.

Quill made the fur fly in the ninth after Donahue had stopped him with several hot jabs, and he tried to rush the Pride of Roxbury off his feet. It ended a hard right over the eye and the gore smeared Donahue's face. The sight of the crimson acted like a red flag in front of a bull, and Quill waded in to make it a finish, but Donahue evaded his rushes best work.

Donahue slipped down in a corner in the tenth round and hurt his ankle, but pluckily continued. There was little pickings in the last few rounds, as Quill was there with his mad rushes, with Donahue boxing nicely and staying cool enough to the mark on the many openings he made.

Willie Riley was careless and got his in the ninth round, failing in without regard to his own defense, making it easier to be scored on.

Willie O'Brien of Cambridge and Young Sullivan of Roxbury went six rounds to a draw.

BADLY HURT IN GAME.

TODD IS SOLD FOR $30,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Direct Hal, a pacer, one of the holders of the world's team or pair record of 2:03¼ for one mile, was sold for $10,000 to Howard Cobb of Ithaca, N. Y., at the Old Glory horse sale in Madison Square Garden to-day.

Another feature was the sale of the eight-year-old brown trotting stallion Todd, half brother to Sadie Mac, winner of the Kentucky Futurity, and sire of Kentucky Todd (2:08¾). Nance O'Neill and a number of other celebrities of the trotting turf, at stallion service in Kentucky, was bought of New York for $30,000 after spirited bidding. He was bred by Malcolm Forbes of Boston.

KID SHEA SET A WARM PACE

HAVERHILL, Nov. 29.—Kid Shea of South Boston set a hot pace in his bout with Jimmy Briggs, but the latter was in good shape and stood the onslaughts well. The decision was a draw.

Young Connolly and Kid Terrio, both of Lawrence, went six rounds to a draw. Harry Burns put Kid Manning out in the first round, and Kid Donahue of Lawrence got the decision over Kid Lambert of this city.

YALE SOCCERS LOST.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Yale's association football players spent the afternoon at Bay Ridge, playing the eleven of the Crescent A. C., the game ending in favor of the Brooklyn players by 3 goals to 0. All the points were made in the first half.

JERRY GAINES IS BEATEN

LAWRENCE, Nov. 29.—After a sharp aggressive contest before the members of the West End Club, Johnny Murrell of Brooklyn won over Jerry Gaines, the market champion.

In the "prelims" Young Delaney of Northboro and Kid O'Brien of Lawrence drew, as did Young Burns of Lawrence and Young Russell of Haverhill. Young Hennessy lost to John McLean of Hudson.

SHRUBB BEAT THREE MEN

FALL RIVER, Nov. 29.—Alfred Shrubb, the champion runner of the world at distances from one mile to ten, won the race on Athletic field, when he defeated in a 10-mile run Frank Kanaly of Boston, Samuel Myers of Pennsylvania and Tom Williams, recently of Wales, all of the fastest long-distance men in this country.

The American runs ran in relays, each man going 3 1-3 miles. Shrubb won by a little over two laps on a seven-lap track.

KNOCKOUTS AT SOUTHBRIDGE

WORCESTER, Nov. 29.—Joe Nelson of Boston failed to show up in the main bout at the Fairview Athletic Club bouts at Southbridge, so the main go between him and Maurice Lemoine was called off.

Jack Finnigan of Cambridge put Eddie O'Neil of South Boston out in the fourth. Maurice Doyle did the same to Haki Heiu, while Billy Donnelly knocked out Amos Cadarette in the sixth.

NEW YORKERS HERE FOR BASKETBALL

The East Boston C. L. A. team will have for its opponent on Saturday next the famous 23rd Street team, champions of New York City. Last year the latter five, after a close contest, succeeded in defeating the Boddie Island quintet by a small margin. This season the home bunch expect to turn the tables as the team has been greatly strengthened by the acquisition of Jack Fox, the Gloversville star, and Ben Vaughn.

"WILD BILL" EXPLAINS

Bill Donovan of the Tigers was a badly disappointed man with their last game. "I told my team-mates that when we tackled the Cubs we would have to change our style of play and that we would have to play for every run, but my advice was not heeded," said he, "and we went down before a well-played game. I also told them that some very effective work in the end, but the preliminaries Scotty Methee won over Kid Terrio in six rounds.

Cecil Mercier of Lawrence substituted for Denny Ryan of Boston, winning over Frank Paul of Albany, N. Y.

Notes of the Diamond

Malloit Kittredge, who is said to have a big league outfield record, is reported as being around the Rochester franchise.

According to the Rochester Herald, the Rochester Exhibition Company has received an offer from Stanley Ferguson from Providence to manage the Rochester club in the Eastern League this year, Mr. Ferguson managed the Providence team for Mr. Chase.

Joe Kelley says that McGinley, with the St. Louis Cardinals some years ago, really was the best pitcher in the Eastern League this year, McGinley worked for Kelley at Toronto and was not sold or drafted.

Out in St. Louis Harry Clark, the Brown's new third sacker is alluded to as the "Willing Worker." This is a refreshing change from the comments on some of the leaguers who are prone to "Willing Shirker."

Manager McMakker of the Cardinals predicts that Shannon Carden and Second Baseman Billy Gilbert will contribute to make his infield one of the best in the country next season.

Everybody in Philadelphia thinks that John Titus is a quince of purest pip, and that he will be a sensation in the National League have better batting average.

Bossman, the Detroit first baseman, one of the two Tigers to do creditable work in the world's series, is a native of Hamilton, Ont.

The Phillies will have plenty of outfield material next season. Besides Titus, whose batting average has turned, Magee will be placed in centre, while Dooin, Cravath, Titus, Demmitt and Clements will be given regular positions. The last named is the best fielder of the bunch, but he has been in the habit of batting poorly.

Charley Comiskey says the White Sox need one more pitcher to put them in the pennant class. New York, Philadelphia, Detroit and a few other teams need several others to be sure of it, and Comiskey thinks that if he can get one he will be done. Did anybody ever hear of a major league team that was not?

Harry Steinfeldt fell off sixty-one points in batting last season. And yet the Cubs won the world's championship.

In a batting way Mike Mitchell proved himself the best youngster of the year in the National League. He batted .316 in 107 games for the Cincinnati Reds. Lobenfelz the Cubs are anxious to have Cincinnati capitalists buy the Colonels from George Tebeau. He's about as popular there as an epidemic of scarlet fever.

Frank Scanlan of the Phillies made but three hits during the season just closed. This first was made on August 15, the second on September 12 and the third on October 4.

MILK TRUST WAR OPENED BY FARMERS

Worcester County Producers Refuse 3½ Cent Rate and Threaten to Stop Supply.

COURT MAY SETTLE CASES

WORCESTER, Nov. 28.—At last definite action against the Milk Trust of Boston will be taken by General C. W. Wood in the interest of the Worcester County Milk Producers.

The Milk Trust paid the producers 3½ cents for each can of eight and one half quarts during October, in accordance with instructions from General Wood the producers who received checks of this figure have sent them back to the milk contractors in the Milk Trust.

They have put a claim in the hands of General Wood, who will probably be law to collect for the milk on the basis of 3½ cents a can.

All of the farmers who have been underpaid declare they will cut off their milk supply to Boston.

Ship Milk To New York.

Hundreds of cans of Worcester county milk is finding its way to New York, it having been found that it is cheaper to ship it from Pittsfield to New York than it would be to ship the same milk from Framingham to Boston.

Cows sold in the past four days at auction in Worcester county are as follows: At Ustbridge, 21; Grafton, 17; Grafton, 67; Holden, 41; Harve, 27; miscellaneous sales, a total of 427.

Requests for milk continue to reach General Wood, who has been supplied by the Boston Milk Trust.

General Wood, assisted by Clarence Albree of Boston, the wealthy Concord milk producer and attorney, are preparing a petition to be sent to Governor Guild asking for an inspection by the office of Dr. Charles Harrington of the State Board of Health.

Fight Goes to Beacon Hill.

Communications on the milk topic between Governor Guild and General Wood have been in progress during the past three weeks, and it is said that all of Governor Guild's letters uphold the actions of Dr. Harrington.

Interest among the Senators and Representatives in the State House is increasing, for many of them having written to General Wood for data on the milk question.

The milk fight before the next session of the General Court promises to be the most important piece of legislation that will be presented to the body.

Fitzgerald has the largest campaign fund ever spent to elect a Mayor of Boston.

Roxbury Storage Salesrooms

Wise Piano Buyer

Don't hover around the high-priced piano district—like the moth around the flame. You'll surely get burned if you do.

The gilded piano stores, with their costly appointments, their high-salaried sales agents, their sellers' commissions, etc., are no place for the economical piano buyer. Come up where the rents are not so high, where there are no agents' commissions for you to pay, and where you can get a financial piano trust agreements in force to make you pay a big, unfair price. Come up to the Roxbury Storage Salesrooms, where we scalp the piano trust every day. Every day is bargain day up here.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, NOVEMBER 29, 1907

Graft!

THAT'S the Issue in This Campaign

This question will be answered by the voters at the coming election of a Mayor:

Shall John F. Fitzgerald be permitted longer to run the affairs of Boston in the interest of himself and the members of his family?

In the last two years Fitzgerald and his brothers have been merely "getting their hands in." That they have succeeded fairly well, for amateurs, is shown by the fact that they have a campaign fund commonly estimated at $200,000 with which to re-elect Brother John.

If in the first two years they can succeed so well as to be able to raise a campaign fund of $200,000, how much would they make in the NEXT two years?

Never before in the history of Boston has there been an administration so tainted with a reputation for petty graft and cheap political "trimming."

Imagine for a moment what will happen if Fitzgerald is re-elected! Imagine him, secure in the enjoyment of ANOTHER term, with all the prestige and power incident to such a "vindication!"

The voters of Boston have made up their minds about the Fitzgerald family. You can hear it in every street car and wherever men meet.

Mr. Fitzgerald cannot obscure the issue by talk about "labor records" and men "untrue to their party."

The workingmen are not all fools, as he seems to believe. When a man like Coulthurst votes for forty-eight labor bills and then opposes two others, because he does not believe they have been properly drawn and HAS THE COURAGE TO SAY SO, the workingmen are not going to turn him down in favor of an habitual trimmer who has a campaign fund of $200,000 RAISED FROM THE OPPRESSORS OF LABOR.

The labor union men of Boston are the most intelligent body of workingmen in the world. They are not only INTELLIGENT, but they also have the same kind of patriotism that stirs the breast of EVERY man who is opposed to graft in public office. They are not going to be fooled by John F. Fitzgerald's $200,000 cloud of dust.

The Lady That Studied the Churches

What One Clergyman Said. What Bob Evans Said

An enterprising editor hired a woman to travel about from church to church, dressed in humble clothing, to find out what kind of a welcome she would get.

The lady was instructed to visit churches all over the country, to write how much interest was shown in her, what the clergymen said to her, if anything, and what kind of treatment her plain little body in very plain clothes might receive.

Her report was not enthusiastic. In the average church the ushers and others seemed little interested in the stranger in a rusty black dress. She was put away in the gallery or in some other corner, and nobody thought of speaking to her.

She wrote this up thoroughly. Some of those described were indignant.

One of the indignant ones is an English clergyman recently imported to help push rich men through the eye of a needle. This gentleman is enthusiastic about his work. He thinks it will be simple to make a needle with an eye large enough. He also thinks that the young woman who dressed herself plainly and went about to test the churches acted improperly; that she was purposely trying to get the churches into trouble. He looked upon her humble costume as a trap, a bait, something unworthy.

He says that had she acted as she should have acted, she would have been warmly received everywhere.

It is comical to suggest to any one who has read the New Testament that a person plainly dressed has no right to expect a friendly reception in a Christian church.

It is not easy to understand just what the imported clergyman would have had the woman do in order to get her pleasant reception. She might, in the slang of the day, have "made a noise like a million dollars"; that, perhaps, would have got her a front seat. But not every one knows how to make a noise like that.

Altogether, the woman's experiences, in various cities all over America, are extremely interesting. They show that it is difficult to practice what we preach day in and day out. Everything becomes a business and a routine after a while, with a few very honorable exceptions!

We think, however, that the reports of the lady mentioned are unjust in one particular. She did not make herself known to the clergymen in the churches. She was put off to one side in her poor clothing by the ushers in very many cases. But those well-dressed young gentlemen do not actually represent the clergyman or his ideas. We believe that in nine cases out of ten where this woman was received coldly by the young men in charge of the seats she would have been received warmly by the clergyman himself had she gone direct to him or given him an opportunity to realize her friendlessness.

It may interest the lady who goes around testing churches to know that "Fighting Bob" Evans of the American navy once did the same thing without meaning to. The story is energetic and interesting.

Admiral Evans, passing by a church, thought it would be a good idea to go in and think about the future, and get out of his fighting mood. He walked in accordingly, and sat down in a pew that pleased him.

After awhile there followed him into the pew a very frigid young man and a very frigid old man. Both looked prosperous, thin and pious to the freezing point. They looked indignantly at "Fighting Bob," without knowing him, and finally the older of the two icicles took out a card, wrote upon it and handed it to Evans. The latter read upon the card this icy message: "I pay two thousand dollars for the exclusive use of this pew." Evans handed the card back, having written underneath:

"You pay too d—— much." And then sat enjoying the sermon and a righteous sense of having rebuked a lack of true Christian spirit in a human icicle.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

She Cites a Crowded Trolley as Proof of the Saying "There Is Always Room at the Top"

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1907, by American-Journal-Examiner

DID you ever enter a trolley car and find it crowded from the centre to the rear platform, while room and a strap, if not a seat, waited at the upper end?

Did you every try to make your way to that upper end of the car? Then you know how, like adamantine rocks, people will stand in your way and refuse to let you pass, however you may indicate your desire to do so.

If you finally insist and ask them to permit you to go up where there is more room, they glare at you as if you had offered a personal insult, and grudgingly give way.

Just Like Life

BUT when you are in such a situation there is only one of two things to do. You must make your way past these human obstacles, or you must stay down at the crowded and uncomfortable end of the vehicle.

Life is just such a car.

There is always a crowd at the rear end! Scores, hundreds and thousands of people are hanging off the platform and jamming the centre aisles, but at the upper end there is room.

They do not budge if you make a gentle effort to move on; they do not yield if you politely ask them to step aside; BUT IF YOU INSIST AND KEEP TRYING THEY HAVE TO LET YOU GO ON.

No obstacle, human or inordinate, has a right to keep you from MOVING ON to where there is room, if you desire to go.

It is well to be courteous, and considerate, and patient; but it is NOT WELL to give in to the obstacles which confront you without good reason.

If you remain in the rear end of life's car because you do not want to annoy the people who are in front of you, and who do not seem to want you to push past them, you are only entering to selfishness and ignoring a higher law of unselfishness.

Push Ahead!

YOU are adding to the crowded condition of a "congested centre" and failing to use a comfortable place, which avails a claimant. You are failing to develop the powers of perseverance in yourself, and you are permitting selfishness and indifference to have their way unrebuked.

Thousands of people are going through life uncomfortable and crowded because they fear to seem aggressive by pushing forward to the vacant places.

If you are not comfortable in the place you occupy, find out first of all where the fault lies.

Perhaps you think God's "Car Company" has not supplied you a place; but first see if there is not room at the upper end. If there is, push ahead, and use it!

Bobbie's Essays

By William F. Kirk

BAD WEATHER

Bobbie, my teecher sed, spell weather for me. W-e-t-h-e-r, I sed. Vary bad, sed the teecher, vary bad spelling, almost as bad as the weather itself, she sed.

So that gave me a idea for a essay about bad weather, wich I will try to rite about.

The first bad weather was the day after Adam & Eve got turned out of the garden of Eden, it was snowing like In Way Down East, Eve, sed Adam, this is a rotten day, & we are up against it, the Garden was nevver like this, sed Adam.

Nevver mind, deer, sed Eve, you are a gaim old sport and you like the heavy going, you are grate on a muddy track. Walk, you sucker, walk, sed Eve.

I know this is a subjeck we promised to keep off of, sed Adam, but I must say that if you hadent ate that lemon or quince or watever it was, sed Adam, we wud be in whare the birds are singing, as it is now, sed Adam, all the sines point to a long hard winter.

Such munny as is lying around, sed Adam, is hoarded away sumwhare & the world at large is staying away from the horse show. O how the wind blows sed Adam, this is bad weather for fig leefs, he sed.

Other bad weather was when Noah & his family was on the ark, it rained forty (40) days & nites, but nobody cared beekaus thay was on the Ark & culdent go out anyway.

Sum of the grate poets was grate hands to rite about bad weather, such as Mister Byron, wich sed The Lightning leeped from crag to crag.

When Pa calm hoam the other nite he was very cold, beekaus he dident have on his overcoat beekaus he dident have a overcoat.

You are lait tonite, sed Ma, you are very lait. Yes, sed Pa, but I was buffeting the storm. Yes, Ma sed, you was buffeting the storm—in a buffet.

Thats the moast I can think of about the weather.
